MINERS SUBMIT $1 A DAY PAY BOOST DEMAND

Lewis, Head of Strong Miners Union, Present Request To Mine Operators.

BIENNIAL PARLEY OPENS

Union Proposes Continuation Of Seven-Hour Day and Five-Day Week.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK—The United Mine Workers of America (CIO) today demanded a $1 a day increase in wages for the 450,000 soft coal miners in the 8-state Applachian region.

This demand was presented through John L. Lewis, the union's president, as representatives of mine operators and the union sat down together for their biennial negotiations for a joint wage agreement to supplant the one expiring April 1.

The miners affected dig nearly three-fourths of the country's bituminous fuel.

Ezra Van Torn of Cleveland, executive vice president of the Ohio Coal association, was elected permanent chairman of the conference.

The union asked the present 7-hour day, 5-day week be extended two years but said that this did not mean it was sacrificing the principle of a 6-hour day and that it did not yield this point for future consideration.

Under the expiring contract, the miners received $6 a day in the northern fields, $5.60 in the south.

The new proposals called for an increase "directly proportionate" to the $1-a-day for men on monthly pay schedules.

The union also demanded two-week annual vacations with pay for all men "in and around" the mines, day men to receive the regular rates of pay, and those working on a tonnage basis to get $7.50 a day for such vacations.

For years the union has sought vacation clauses without success.

The union also demanded that mine workers be guaranteed not less than 200 working days each year.

A union spokesman described the demands as "not revolutionary," and they came as somewhat of a surprise to some operators who had anticipated that the union would ask the 6-hour day and a wage increase up to $3-a-day.

The Appalachian area covers Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Virginia, Ohio, eastern Kentucky, Maryland, Michigan and Tennessee.

SAW HER KILLER

Western Girl Awake When Slain, Investigators Assert.

KANSAS CITY, Mo. —(U.P.)— Leila Adele Welsh was awake and fully conscious when she was beaten and slashed to death in her bedroom, pathologists who studied laboratory tests of her blood, said today.

The presence of adrenaline in her blood indicated that the 24-year-old former school teacher, who was murdered and mutilated early Sunday, either was intensely frightened or angered just before her death, the pathologists said.

Only such emotions could have activated the adrenal glands to the extent shown in the blood, they said.

Police investigated every possible clue and questioned numerous suspects. The sheriff's office held two suspects but officers doubted that either was involved.

ROLLER TO HEAD FUND CAMPAIGN

Mansfield Pastor Chosen to Direct 1941 Drive; New Agency Added.

Initial plans for the 22nd annual campaign of the Mansfield Community Fund and the addition of a new agency to the Fund group were announced today by members of the executive committee.

Robert Remy, vice president of the Fund, announced that Rev. David N. Roller, pastor of First Presbyterian church and former president of the Mansfield Civic Music Association, will head the campaign this year as general chairman. The campaign will open April 28.

The drive for funds this year will cover a new service to the community for the Mansfield Dental Clinic becomes an agency of the Fund this year, following its acceptance last night by the executive committee.

Of the three applications to the Fund for participation this year, only the Dental Clinic was unconditionally accepted. Definite action on the application of the Volunteers of America will be taken at a meeting of the board later this week, Remy said today.

The application of the Service League was rejected for constitutional reasons, Remy said. He explained that the constitution of the Community Fund provides that no agency may be accepted which duplicates the work that is being done by any other agency in the fund or which any other agency is capable of doing if provided with funds for it. Members of the board expressed the belief that at least two of their agencies were doing the same type of work as the Service League—the Salvation Army

FDR EXPECTED TO CALL FOR THREE BILLION

Financial Measure Expected To Reach Congress Tomorrow Seeking Authorization.

AMENDMENT VOTE NEAR

Lease-Lend Bill Expected to Get Approval In Final Form Yet Today.

BULLETIN

WASHINGTON —(INS)—President Roosevelt will ask congress for $7,000,000,000 to launch the lease-lend program, it was anounced today following a conference between the chief executive and his legislative fiscal experts.

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON—President Roosevelt, awaiting only the go-ahead signal from congress to translate plans into action, figured up today the billions of dollars immediately necessary to set busy American munitions factories to work on more guns, ammunition, ships and planes for Britain.

His estimate, which most informed persons believed would range between $3,000,000,000 and $4,000,000,000,000, was expected to be transmitted to congress tomorrow along with a request for the funds to be granted partly in actual cash and partly in authorizations for future expenditures.

The British aid bill, empowering him to act, was due to be cleared by the house this afternoon, and leaders arranged to short-cut usual legislative procedure and rush it to the White House for the president's signature tonight or tomorrow—almost exactly two months after he proposed its enactment Jan. 10.

Stephen Early, press secretary, said that the chief executive would have some word to give out in connection with the signing, but whether that would take the form

HAS CLOSE CALL

Air Cadet's 'Chute Opens Only Fifty Feet From Ground.

SAN DIEGO, Cal. —(INS)— A parachute which opened only 50 feet from the ground today was credited with saving the life of Charles W. Rickman, 23-year-old army cadet flyer, after his plane collied with another, causing two deaths.

Occupants of the other training plane, Gordon F. Rosenstock, Petersburg, Va., an instructor, and Cadet Lynn E. Rogers, 26, of San Diego, were killed.

Cadet Rickman jumped from his plane after the collision, witnesses said, and was saved from death when his parachute opened 50 feet from the ground. He suffered serious injuries, however.

Foremen Told Industry Must Train Workers for Defense

Industry must train more young workers for defense jobs and not leave too much of the task to national defense training schools, Russel J. Greenly, chairman of the industrial education department of Purdue university, said last night in a talk before 150 members of the Mansfield-Shelby Foremen's club at the Mansfield-Leland hotel.

"Foremen must begin to train their own help, teaching young people that the only way to build America is by the sweat of their brows and the application of practical, clear thinking," he told the men.

"We have not done much in industry in preparing pre-foremen to take care of the condition brought about by the urgent need for defense materials," he asserted.

"We are not quite sure yet where we are going in this defense move, but we are all trying to see the job through. You foremen are all tied up with this whole defense program," Greenly added.

Even your wives can play their part in this by getting up a little earlier and preparing a good breakfast so you won't have to eat a make-shift meal or take time out from your job to have breakfast after leaving home."

Industry needs units now as

U. S. DEFENSE HITS ICE TRAYS

More Refrigerator Pans to Be Made of Rubber to Save Aluminum.

If you should happen to buy a new electric refrigerator, and find that almost all of the ice trays are of rubber, instead of only one or two—blame it on the defense program.

Most ice cube trays are made of aluminum—that is, they were. The government has announced a priority order on aluminum, in order to assure its availability for defense work. Hence refrigerator manufacturers can't have as much as they want.

Yesterday E. R. Stettinius, jr., defense director of priorities, requested the mechanical refrigerator industry to reduce the amount of aluminum used in the production of domestic equipment.

Westinghouse officials today announced that substitution of rubber and porcelain enamel was already under way in the production of ice tray equipment.

They said that not all trays would be made of substitute materials.

It has been estimated by officials in Washington that the move would save about 800,000 pounds of aluminum a month during the next few months for production of national defense materials.

It was estimated that approximately two-thirds of the present aluminum supply would be conserved in this manner at the Mansfield plant.

Officials said they were concerned over the use of substitute materials, since a reduction of the use of aluminum by the entire refrigerator industry would throw an unexpected load on producers of the substitutes.

Production of equipment not yet seriously affected it was pointed out, remains contingent on the supply of the new materials now being used.

BALLOON BARRIER

PEORIA, Ill.—(AP)—Peoria merchants are experimenting with a balloon barrage to counteract an aerial invasion.

PREDICTS DROP

Sherwood Says Relief Costs In State Will Decline.

COLUMBUS—(U.P.)—State Welfare Director Charles L. Sherwood today forecast a decrease of approximately $1,202,000 in Ohio's relief bill for the first two months of 1941 compared with the costs during January and February of 1940.

Sherwood attributed the sharp decline to industrial gains brought on by the national defense program and to a comparatively mild winter.

The director based his prediction on preliminary reports received from 109 of the state's 153 relief areas. These units indicated that relief costs for February would approximate $1,892,000, or about $619,824 below the total expended in February, 1940. January relief totaled $582,128 under identical month last year.

Huron County Motorist Held After Striking Man Trying To Put Out Fire.

A Huron county farmer was in the Richland county jail today accused of striking another farmer in the face with an automobile jack as the latter tried to help him extinguish a fire in the rear of his wrecked car early today.

County Prosecutor Harold Lutz said the incident happened in northern Richland county near Rome at about 3:30 a. m. today.

Lutz said he was told the Huron farmer's auto had struck a bridge, and when the crash was heard by Oliver C. Stoner, who lived near the scene of the accident, Stoner hurried to the aid of the driver. When he arrived the rear of the car was afire, the upholstery smoldering.

As Stoner tried to extinguish the fire, the driver struck him in the face with the jack. In the meantime, Stoner's wife had phoned the sheriff's office, and

City Replacing Traffic Stop Signs With New, Larger Ones

Mansfield is due to get some new stop signs to be used at dangerous traffic points throughout the city. Not only will the new signs be larger than those used now but they will also sport a new color.

The present 12 by 18-inch orange signs will be replaced by 18 by 18-inch yellow markers. The shape will also be changed from oblong to octagon.

C. M. Crafton, service-safety director, announced today that 40 of the new-type signs have been installed. He said the city hopes to change all of its 200 signs into the new type within the near future.

In addition to the stop signs, the city will get new residential speed limit markers, Crafton said. A donation of $250 worth of steel from the Empire Steel and Tin Plate company will be used to make the residential signs.

The work of cutting and painting the signs will be done by vocational classes at Mansfield high school.

The stop signs will retain their black letters and will be placed at about the same height. Crafton said that he would place orders for more of the signs within the next few weeks. The change is being made to effect higher visibility of the signs at dangerous intersections, according to Crafton.

View Matsuoka Berlin Trip As Key to Action

Yugoslavia Calls Crown Council to Decide on Joining Axis; British Admit Sea Losses Increase; Air Forces Trade Blows.

BULLETIN

LONDON—(AP)—Air Minister Sir Archibald Sinclair assured the British today that American airplanes "will get here in time" for the battle of the Atlantic. The air minister told the house of commons that the RAF was "now on the threshold of its period of greatest expansion."

(By Associated Press)

Propaganda guns of the Rome-Berlin-Tokyo alliance boomed in concert against the United States today as Japan's Foreign Minister Yosuke Matsuoka prepared to leave the Far East for important talks with Adolf Hitler and Benito Mussolini.

Fascist sources in Rome hinted at an impending Japanese move under the triple alliance in reaction to the United States' British aid bill.

The Italian newspaper La Tribuna declared bluntly that Matsuoka's trip was "the immediate answer to Washington's threatening move."

"Yesterday America spoke," the newspaper said, evidently referring to senate passage of the British aid bill Saturday. "Soon Japan will say its word. It is for this that Matsuoka is coming to Berlin and Rome."

Other reaction in Axis capitals included:

Berlin: Informed Nazis said Matsuoka's visit was one of a series of counter actions to the United States aid-to-Britain bill. It was regarded as significant that Matsuoka would be accompanied by military experts.

Rome: Italians said Matsuoka would discuss Japan's role under the three-power pact in the event of trouble with the United States over the British aid bill.

Stefani, the official Italian news agency, declared "the approach of spring, with its expected offensives, gives Matsuoka's visit exceptional importance."

Only yesterday, Fascist Editor Virginio Gayda, often known as Premier Mussolini's spokesman, threatened "many disagreeable surprises to England and the United States in the Pacific."

The Japanese foreign minister was scheduled to leave Tokyo tomorrow night, traveling via Moscow.

In the Balkan crisis, Yugoslavia's Regent Prince Paul summoned the crown council to meet tomorrow to decide whether Yugoslavia would join the Axis—under a reported demand by Adolf Hitler that she sign as a full-fledged member.

Belgrade sources said yesterday Hitler had refused to accept a mere non-aggression pact with Yugoslavia, and most diplomatic

Hope Fading For British War Victory

WASHINGTON — There is a rising tide of opinion in official quarters today that Great Britain alone cannot defeat Germany and that, if the British manage to hold out this summer, the European conflict eventually will end in a negotiated compromise peace.

Some of the highest authoritative sources in Washington in close touch with the European situation are convinced it will be impossible for the British to defeat the German army on the European continent even with all the help President Roosevelt plans to give Britain under the lease-lend bill.

IN SECOND DAY

New York Bus Strike Shows No Sign of Settlement.

NEW YORK —(INS)— As New York City's bus strike moved into its second day with no immediate sign of settlement, bus line operators today accused the CIO-affiliated Transport Workers Union of ordering the walkout without the sanction of the drivers.

"The officials of the Transport Workers Union insisted on this strike," a statement issued by the Fifth Avenue Coach Co., and the New York City Omnibus Corp., operators of the 27 idle bus lines, charged. "They . . . not our men . . . are responsible for it."

Efforts of Mayor F. H. LaGuardia to settle the strike, which has paralyzed 95 per cent of the surface transportation in Manhattan and affected 1,000,000 commuters, thus far have proved futile. Both sides, according to prepared statements, are ready for a long fight.

Mansfield Boy, 5, Goes 'Home,' Gives Parents a Scare

Billy Wright, 5, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Wright of 260 North Main street, was at home yesterday but nevertheless became homesick.

The Wrights moved recently from Harker street but Billy must have felt some kind of attachment for the old address. Anyway, Mansfield police searched for him for over five hours yesterday after he had been reported missing.

Mrs. Florence Davey, owner of the home now occupied by the Wrights, reported his disappearance to police shortly after 11 a. m. and the search was on. His parents were away from home at the time.

While patrolmen scoured the streets for him, Billy wandered eight blocks down to his old home at 263 Harker street.

Neighbors, who had learned of the search, found Billy at 5:30 p. m. sitting complacently on the front porch. They immediately returned him to his parents.

Six Hurt In Cincinnati Airliner Crash

BROADWAY

—By Dorothy Kilgallen

Meet John Doe's Diary.

You are accustomed to seeing frequently in this space a column entitled "Miss Midnight's Diary." Today you will read a diary—but not Miss Midnight's. A long way from Miss Midnight's.

Kilgallen.

This is John Doe's dairy. You know John Doe. You will be hearing a lot about him in the coming weeks because he is the hero of the new Frank Capra picture. But a motion picture can only confirm what you already know about John Doe. Because John Doe is you . . . and you . . . and you. He is the heart, the mind, and the character of America.

Here is what he writes. It will seem familiar to you:

Monday: Got up early and went to the office, but I was 15 minutes late. It seems that no matter how early I get up, I'm always 15 minutes late getting down to work. I thought that would be true even if I didn't try to get up early, but it wasn't. The day I tried that I was a half hour late.

When I got in today the boss was waiting for me. He's a nice guy, but gosh I hate him today. He would have to bawl me out in front of the whole office force. And the way be growled, "Fifteen minutes late again today, Doe," made it seem like I'd committed a terrible crime.

I didn't say anything, but I should have. I should have said:

"What about all those nights I stayed when we were rushed? You're not counting those, are you? You didn't even thank me, those night, you stingy miser. But when I sleep 15 minutes late you scream as if I were robbing you. Fine one you are to talk about robbing people, with the wages you pay around here. I've got a good mind to quit. Yeh, Quit. That's what I said!"

That's what I should have said. And I would have, too, only I remembered suddenly that when I got sick last wintet and didn't have any dough, the boss paid my hospital bill.

Tuesday: Got into the office early today for a change, and it was almost too much for me. I couldn't do any work for the first 15 minutes.

Took Jane and Junior to the movies after dinner. It was Dorothy Lamour in one of those South Sea Island pictures. Every time I see one of those pictures I think how I'd like to get on a freighter and sail to one of those places.

I've been thinking that since I was a kid, I guess, but I've still never been on a freighter and the furthest I ever traveled was the time Jane and I went to the Chicago World's Fair on a bus.

Wednesday:. Spent all evening making out my income tax. This year the figures didn't make any more sense than they ever did. I spent a lot of time figuring out whether or not I ought to make certain deductions that I know aren't exactly legitimate, and in the end I didn't make them. After all, these are tough times for the government, too. I could think of worse ways of spending the money.

* * *

Thursday: Got to the office on time again this morning, which makes it three in a row. Was in fine humor all day, but lost my temper at lunchtime. I went to the same cafeteria I go to every noon, and ran into the same long line I always run into. I could see the dozen or so cups of chocolate pudding—my favorite dessert—on the counter when I got on the line. By the time my turn came, they were all gone.

Friday: Frankie, the guy at the next desk, got me steamed up today at lunchtime and I broke my New Year's resolution not to make any bets.

Frankie is a Giants' fan, of all things, so we got arguing baseball, although what a Giants' fan would know about baseball I wouldn't know. Anyway, we made a bet. I said the Dodgers would win the pennant this year. Gee, they got to with Medwick, Higbe, Owen, and those other guys. How can they lose?

Saturday: Got home from work by 1:30, and fixed the front door Jane's been yelling about. Why she couldn't fix a little thing like that I'll never be able to understand, but why argue.

Everything went quietly until Junior came in. I knew something was wrong with him when he didn't have anything to say, so I asked him. Before he could tell me, Mrs. O'Brien was popping in the front door, all out of breath. It seems Junior broke one of her windows playing ball. Paid her $1.50 to have it fixed. I know how much it costs, because that's what I had to pay for the same window last summer.

Sunday: Went to church today, first time in a month. I ought to go more often—but I'll probably miss next Sunday, in spite of my good intentions.

After church I read the comics to Junior—they were pretty funny today. How do those guys think up all those things?

And there he is, dear readers. You've met John Doe.

HOLLYWOOD

HOLLYWOOD—The predicted tidal wave of musical films is on its way. The singles already released represent the merest preliminary trickles in the advancing flood.

On a recent day in the studios, when on the various lots a total of fifty pictures were in production, four of the number dealt in tunes wholesale: RKO's "Sunny," with Anna Neagle, M-G-M's "Lady Be Good," with Ann Sothern, 20th Century's "Great American Broadcast" with Alice Faye, Jack Oakie, John Payne, and Republic's "Sis Hopkins," with Judy Canova and Jerry Colonna.

ROBBIN COONS

It was a musically "quiet" day—the calm before the lilting thunderstorm. The week's previews were significant. Three out of four featured music, emphasizing the coloratura gifts of Misses Deanna Durbin, Susanna Foster and Kathryn Grayson.

In the immediate offing are films like "The Chocolate Soldier," from the operetta, for Nelson Eddy and the girl from opera, Rise Stevens; "Birth of the Blues," for Bing Crosby and Mary Martin; "Rookies on Parade," comedy with music for Bob Crosby and Ruth Terry; "Miami," for Carole Landis and Jack Haley; "Show Business," for Rudy Vallee and a raft of musical talent including Ann Miller, Rosemary Lane, Glenn Gray and orchestra, and Six Hits and a Miss.

Columbia and 20th Century-Fox seem to think more highly of the musical trend than other lots. Zanuck has been adding color musicals to his schedule with such regularity, it's difficult to report, on a given day, whether the total is seven, eight, or nine—but it adds up to busy times ahead for people like Payne, Faye, Grable and Don Ameche. Columbia, sponsoring "Show Business," is busy on "Betty Co-ed," which will bring back dancing Ruby Keeler with Harriet Hilliard and her band leader-husband, Ozzie Nelson.

With B. G. (Buddy) DeSylva the production chief at Paramount now, you can look for that lot, currently engrossed in comedy, drama, and melodrama, to lean toward greater musical emphasis. DeSylva's recent films "Bachelor Mother," "Caught in the Draft" were non-musical but his early productions at 20th and Universal stressed the tuneful.

REPUBLICANS IN SENATE BALK ON 3 KEY MEASURES

Caucus Rift Stalls Vote on Bill to Give 12 Million In Sales Tax to Cities.

(By Associated Press)

COLUMBUS—Three key bills in the Bricker administration's financial program were stalled indefinitely in the Ohio senate today by refusal of two or three Republican senators to support them.

The Republican majority of 19 out of the 36 members caucused for two hours last night without reaching agreement. Republican leaders then abandoned their plans to bring up for a vote today the measure allocating $12,000,000 a year in sales tax revenue to the local governments.

They hoped the recalcitrant Republicans would be won over by next Monday, but were not sure. Two Republicans voting with the Democratic minority could defeat any proposition.

The two other measures blocked with the sales tax bill are:

To divert $5,000,000 in auto license tag funds from highways to the local governments for general operating needs, traffic enforcement and street cleaning, and

To reenact the one-cent-a-gallon liquid fuel tax for two years.

The indentity of the Republican "hold-outs" was not made public.

Meanwhile, the Democratic minority in a caucus decided to oppose the auto tag diversion measure and to seek an increase in the sales tax allocation. Their strategy on the sales tax will be this: To demand $15,000,000 to $17,000,000 a year in amendments and, failing this, to ask that all revenue from the levy above $50,000,000 be given to the local governments. Gov. John W. Bricker estimated the sales tax will produce $51,500,000 a year in 1941 and 1942.

Insistence of some Republicans upon an increase in the local government allocation in preference to the license tag diversion is the main source of difficulty on the majority side.

In the house of representatives the Democratic leadership introduced a resolution asking the governor to recommend an increase in the city-county share of sales tax income. If this is not done, the resolution said, the tax should be removed from all food, clothing, medical supplies and fuel used in the home.

SEES INCREASED USE OF PLASTIC

Ford Envisions Time 'Soon' When Farmer Grows Most Materials For Car.

(By Associated Press)

WAYS, Ga.—Henry Ford envisions a day "only several years off" when a farmer will grow most of the materials going into his motor car and perhaps provide the fuel from plants as well.

"We'll have an experimental body ready at our plant in a month or so made chiefly of plastics from cellulose fibers easily grown," the Detroit automobile manufacturer said in an interview today.

"The plastic body will be several hundred pounds lighter, and will be a better body for several reasons," he added.

Ford said the "field of plastics is almost unlimited, and we'll see them used more and more in houses and offices instead of wood."

He displayed some attractive bath and kitchen tiles and what appeared to be silk socks.

"Those tile were made from corn cobs and tree bark right here in our laboratory," Ford asserted. "The socks used to be ordinary sawdust."

He said it was known that, if necessary, "we can produce satisfactory fuels for engines from potatoes, corn, rice and other farm products."

Ford said experiments were underway to get away from materials of prime importance to national defense.

"Many new materials, which can be made from fast-growing plants, will aid in conserving minerals in years to come," he declared.

The manufacturer said chemistry would help to renew an interest in agriculture, and he advocated farming for security.

"A farm boy ought to be able to fill his pockets full of seeds and make himself a good living from them," he added.

100,000 VISITORS AT CITY'S PARKS, ANNUAL REPORT SHOWS

Mansfield's parks had more than 100,000 visitors for various activities during the 1940 summer season, it was estimated today in the annual report of the Mansfield board of park commissioners.

Prospect park claimed the largest number of visitors with an estimated 35,000. Other attendance estimates were: North Lake park, 22,000; Maple lake, 20,000; Johns park, 11,600; and Liberty park, 10,000.

In its financial report, the board disclosed that the city's five independent park associations had contributed a total of $2,932 for permanent park improvements.

Council appropriated $16,100 for the 1940 park budget and added an extra $1,047.61 for installation of the Liberty heating plant and tennis courts at Maple lake. Construction of the Liberty shelter house cost $1,000 and the addition to the North Lake shelter house, $1,400.

Additional to the municipal budget was money raised by the park associations by staging card parties, lawn fetes and other social meetings.

Of the $2,932 raised by the associations, Prospect earned $1,181; Liberty, $547; Maple Lake, $459; North Lake, $453; and Johns, $292. The receipts of the Liberty pool were $1,535 which goes into the city's general fund.

Prospect spent most of its receipts for a new lawnmower, a heating plant and for general improvements and equipment. Other parks contributed to the improvements being carried on in the municipal program, the report said.

Roy W. Vaughn, president of the board, praised the work of the associations, saying, "of particular importance is this money raised and spent by these associations, not counting the hours of free labor furnished, that goes for the betterment of these parks at no great cost to the city. The social advantage cannot be computed. Each association should be highly complimented."

Main street looked like an army reviewing ground for a half hour this morning as 35 units of mechanized cavalry enroute from Cleveland to Cincinnati passed through the city. Police Chief Meade K. Bates had ten patrolmen lining the street to give the units through-passage. The cavalry used route 42, one of the nation's military roads.

This morning's session of municipal court had its humorous side and the audience got quite a chuckle out of a discussion that went on between attorneys and Judge G. E. Kalbfleisch. When Atty. John O'Donnell requested that hearing on a case he represented be continued for 30 days, City Solicitor Marion D. Ward told the court he probably would not be in Mansfield at that time. Judge Kalbfleisch replied that "maybe none of us will be here at that time." He advanced the hearing three weeks.

As a matter of fact the car got a little hot under hood and burst into flames. Dent extinguished the fire but he had to hire a cab to get to the dinner.

PLANE STRIKES RIVER DIKE IN BLINDING RAIN

Ship Lands Hard, Then Leaves Rnnway; Pilot Seriously Hurt; 5 Injured.

(By Associated Press)

CINCINNATI—Six of 11 persons aboard an American airliner were injured, the pilot and a passenger perhaps seriously, when the twin-motored craft landed amid hard rain on the city's airport last night, slipped from a concrete runway into tire-deep mud and rammed a bordering river-dike.

Capt. Lester Bryant, 33, Chivago, army-trained "million-miler" with 15 years of flying behind him, and Wesley McCleaster of Indianapolis suffered possible skull fractures, cuts and severe bruises.

Bryant and McCleaster were hospitalized along with J. W. McNeil of Evanston, Ill., who complained of a back injury.

The plane, scheduled to leave Chicago at 6:15 p. m. (EST), arrived over Lunken airport about 8:30—a half hour late. The accident possibly was caused, First Officer James J. Murray indicated, by "heavy rain that obscured visibility" just after the plane landed.

In the fraction of a second before the ship hit the 25-foot earthen wall, Bryant and Murray, also of Chicago, cut the ignition switch, preventing fire.

Passengers praised conduct of the crew, and one, Fred Nonnamaker, jr., of Chicago, who holds a private pilot's license, declared:

"Bryant and Murray did a beautiful job."

The ship's right motor was torn off and the portside engine embedded in the dike separating the airport from the Little Miami river.

Besides Bryant and Murray, the crew included Miss Audrey Marquiss of Chicago, stewardess. Examination disclosed that she suffered possible muscle and ligament strains.

Others aboard the plane:

Ellis D. Verink, Chicago, district manager for the Union Central Life Insurance Co., slight ankle hurts; and Miss Grace Butler, Des Moines, Ia.; Ted C. Lemon, W. L. Dunn and George Richardson, all of Chicago, uninjured.

Janitor Forgets About Pool, So School Has Flood

CINCINNATI —(U.P.)—An overflowing swimming pool converted the halls and classrooms of Woodward high school into small ponds today and sent streams of water rushing down the stairways from the fifth to the first floor.

The trouble began according to school officials, when a night janitor turned on the water into a girls' swimming pool on the fifth floor "and forgot about it."

The tank, 25 by 25 feet, with a capacity of 65,000 gallons tank, started overflowing shortly before 5 a. m. It was discovered by a patrolman walking his beat, who saw water trickling from a fifth floor window.

He notified three night janitors, and together they rushed to the fifth floor, where they were greeted by a gushing waterfalls. The water could not be turned off until firemen arrived.

Funeral services will be held in Nankin Thursday at 2 p. m. Officiating at the rites will be Rev. J. H. Steed and Rev. George Brown. Burial will be in Nankin cemetery.

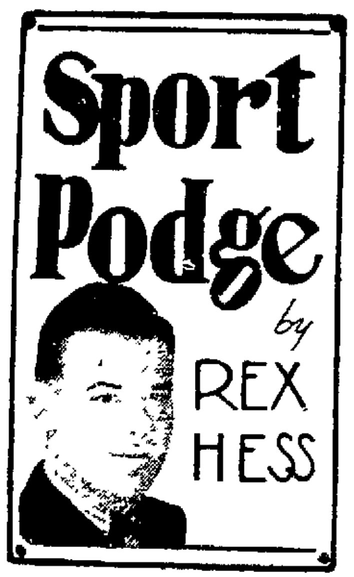
Shiplet, Burkholder Make All-Ohio Honor Squad



And what, my friends, do you think of the monicker tacked on the contract of that recently signed Mansfield Braves rookie hurler from Hamtramck, Mich.—Zigmund Siatczynski?

Now there's a mouthful of mush for you to spit out some foggy morning. If you can look in the mirror and repeat that name over slowly and distinctly, have no fears, you'll pass muster at the office or shop or store or wherever.

If the kid makes good and sticks with the Braves, his name undoubtedly will appear in public prints and go down in the records as Ziggy Siat.

But not—most certainly not—Zigmund Siatcyzinski!

Zigmund Siatczynski is one name that challenges that old high school yell:

"That's the way you spell it,
Here's the way you yell it."

Spell it you can, maybe. But yell it—oh, no!

* * *

So Ziggy Siat, we'll see (you) at the ball park. But Zigmund Siatczynski, already you have put my typewriter on the Bliatblynski.

Seems Coach Vern Hoffman had the dope when he said there were five teams in that Sandusky tournament with only a few points between them, and Mansfield had as good a chance as any.

Now that the Tygers have bumped off the Buckeye league champion Tiffin Columbians, perhaps Mansfield fans will make the Sandusky trip next Friday night to see the Hoffman hoopsters battle Fremont's Little Giants in something like respectable numbers.

Other cities in the tourney were not impressed by the Tyger chances, but the Columbians entered the joust with a jinx over their heads—they had never defeated Mansfield in tournament play.

Jerry Liska, Fremont sports scribe, wrote his last column for the Fremont News-Messenger last Friday, and left for Lansing, Mich., and an Associated Press job.

Dick Behr wrote his first column in Liska's old corner Saturday, and immediately beat the drums for Fremont's Little Giants and their chances at Sandusky.

Mansfield edged Fremont in a torrid, over-time tournament tilt last year and there'll be a crowd of Fremonters on hand Friday night to see the two teams renew their argument.

This one bloomed at 4:30 the other yawning:

"If you can't lend me a buck, at least you could lease me one."

(In the cold light of day, I fear it droops.)

Elyria Bounces Cavaliers

Akron South Quintet Upset In Tourney.

(By International News Service)

The Ohio high school cage arena still quaked today following the biggest upheaval of the dope so far in the tourney season—the defeat of Akron South's mighty Cavaliers.

The Cavaliers, one of the top-heavy favorites for state-wide honors since zooming to a 17-game winning streak, last night were rudely pushed from the Class A championship picture by a potent Elyria team, 41-36.

The defeat of the Akron five removed another of last year's "blue-ribbon 32" and also an all-state performer—lanky Wyndol Gray. Gray was the state's leading Class "A" scorer during the past season and fans were looking toward a new state tourney record from him next week—but that can all be forgotten now.

Massillon and Canton Timken advanced in the Akron tourney along with Elyria. The Timken five, defeated but once during the season, turned back Akron Kenmore, 27-23, while the Tigers drubbed Akron North, 44-25.

Paced by Horace Gillom and Ray Getz, who scored 23 points between them, Massillon grabbed an early lead over North and was never seriously threatened.

On the other hand, Timken had a tough battle all the way with Kenmore after leading 14-10 at the half. Roman paced the Timken team with 10 tallies.

The Toledo tourney—the last in the state to get underway—opened with a four-game bang last night with Toledo Waite, the defending district champ, advancing by virtue of a 56-19 rout of Whitmer. However, Clay high school, runner-up to Waite last season, was less fortunate and fell before Toledo Scott, 36-33.

In the other games played on opening night, Sylvania spoiled Gibsonburg's debut in the "A" ranks by drubbing the latter team in a defensive battle, 19-12, while Toledo Central Catholic stormed over Woodward of Toledo, 35-22.

Prospect Steals Tournament Show

Prospect pasteboard peelers stole the show in the city parks card tournament last night as Frank Loykovitch won high bridge honors and Cliff Mitchell scored high pinochle.

Prospect boosted itself into consideration for tournament championship, lifting its points to within three and a half of the leading North Lake team.

Present point standings: North Lake 15½, Liberty 14, Johns 13, Prospect 12, and South Maple 9.

Here Are New Members of Wigwam

Baujan Seeks New League

Circuit Would Include Schools of 5 States.

DAYTON—(AP)—A classy new sports league embracing colleges of five states is being sought energetically by Harry Baujan, Dayton university director of athletics.

Baujan mentioned as possible members of a six-team conference: Dayton, Marshall of Huntington, W. Va., Butler of Indianapolis, Bradley of Peoria, Ill., Toledo university, Xavier of Cincinnati, Wayne, Detroit, West Virginia, Western Reserve, Carnegie Tech, Youngstown, Ohio U., Miami, Ohio Wesleyan, Akron, Western (Mich.) State Teachers, Cincinnati and several others.

"Somewhere among those schools is a fine conference," Baujan declared. "We hope to line up a six-club loop, and such a league would solve a lot of our problems which center around schedule-making and gate receipts."

Baujan said that "a good, fast league naturally would attract more fans than a whole season of 'exhibition' games on which nothing rides but single victories."

"If we get six teams in the loop, each school could play all the others in football, and still have room on the schedule to take care of games with the 'natural rivals' not in the circuit."

The Dayton athletic chief admitted that the problems were numerous, however, in lining up the schools.

Marshall college is ironing out some of the traits to which members of the old Buckeye loop have objected, Baujan said, and the college is definitely part of the new plan.

CHATLAIN AWARDED HIS FINAL LETTER

SPRINGFIELD—(AP)—Wittenberg college basketball players voted diminutive Chief Heskett, senior forward, as the "most valuable" player of the 1940-41 basketball team at last night's banquet. Heskett, of Springfield, scored 767 points in three years. Six others besides Heskett received varsity letter awards, including Dick and Bob Caton of Urbana, Earl Fisher of New Philadelphia, Roy Shiel of Canton and Ed Chatlain, Mansfield, senior.

Little Thunder Sticks to Guns

FORT MYERS, Fla.—(UP)—The Cleveland Indians, back at work after their sojourn in Havana, began preparations today for a two-week series of exhibition games as the absence of Roy Weatherly assumed serious proportions.

The Tribe's vice president, C. C. Slapnicka, maintained that Weatherly had not communicated with the front office for weeks from his holdout headquarters at Hot Springs, Ark.

According to Manager Roger Peckinpaugh, only the outfielders' demand for a two-year contract has held up an agreement. And that type of contract, Peck believes, would not be a wise move for Weatherly.

"From my own exeprience, I think he is making a mistake if this is the only thing standing between him and a settlement of the case," Peckinpaugh said.

"One contract I signed during my playing days that I have always regretted was one for three years. In my second season under that paper I had one of the best seasons of my career. But I couldn't cash in on it the next year, and I never hit that peak again."

Redlegs Still Have Hurling

Mound Staff Maintains Top Loop Ranking.

TAMPA, Fla.—(UP)—The best pitching in the league has carried the Cincinnati Reds to national loop pennants the past two seasons and there is little relief in sight for enemy batsmen.

The Redleg mound staff at the current stage of spring training stacks up stronger than last season.

Big Paul Derringer, one of the two Redleg mound aces, unlimbered for the first time yesterday and held the New York Yankees scoreless for three innings and struck out four of the erstwhile Bronx bombers. The 34-year-old veteran had all of his stuff and looks good for another 20 victories next summer.

In addition, Witt Guise, a 31-year-old rookie and John Hutchings, a relief hurler of last year, showed up well on the Cincinnati mound.

Incidentally, the Reds won the game, 3 to 2, with the help of a two-run homer by Bill Werber, first round-triper for the champions in three exhibition games.

Manager Bill McKechnie is confident that Johnny Vander Meer and Monte Pearson will strengthen the pitching corps this season and Gene Thompson is tipped to make another advance.

McKechnie was impressed with strength in another department yesterday. He liked the showing of Shortstop Bobby Mattick obtained from the Chicago Cubs to help fill the gap left by the departure of Billy Myers.

The Reds were idle today before engaging the St. Louis Cardinals tomorrow at St. Petersburg.

M'Carthy Elated By Rookies

Priddy, Rizzuto Make Marse Joe Happy.

ST. PETERSBURG—(AP)—Joe McCarthy is not a man who enthuses easily about a new ball player, because he has handled Babe Ruth and Lou Gehrig and Joe DiMaggio and has been surfeited with baseball success as manager of the New York Yankees.

So it was little short of amazing to sit on the bench with him and hear him rave about the two youngsters out on the field—Shortstop Phil Rizzuto and Second Baseman Gerald Priddy. Either Joe is softening up or these two really are something special. As practically everybody knows, they came up from Kansas City together this spring.

"If you want to see something pretty, just watch them," he said with something akin to parental pride. "Look at that Rizzuto. How can he miss being popular. He's little but he's strong as a bull—great arms and hands. Just sit here and watch him and Priddy handle that ball.

"The beauty of it is that if I didn't have either one of them I'd still have the same club I had last year, and we finished third with the poorest hitting in the American league most of the year and with no pitching to speak of from either Monte Pearson or Lefty Gomez.

"We'll be strong if even one of these new pitchers comes through, and I never saw a greater bunch of prospects. There's a half dozen of them with great records in double A company at Kansas City and Newark. They've all got fast balls and know how to pitch."

"Who is that playing first base—Zeke Bonura?" interrupted a heckler. He got a wintry stare from McCarthy.

"That," said Joe, "is Joe Gordon, and he is plenty of first baseman too. Maybe he's got a few little things to learn about playing first, but it won't take him long—not that boy. All he's got to learn is how to handle his feet, and that's easy for him. He used to be an acrobat.

* * *

"There are a lot of silly ideas about players not being able to shift from one position to another, anyway. Gordon was great on second and he'll be just as good on first."

City League Plays Tonight

Athletics and Sohioans Clash In Feature Tilt.

The City A basketball league resumes its second round playoff at Mansfield Senior high school tonight with the first game at 7:30 bringing together the Mansfield Athletic Supplies, undefeated leaders of the second round, and the Blue Goose Sohioans, winner of the first round title and also defenders of the 1939-40 championship.

An interesting battle should arise since these two teams are the highest scoring teams of the league, with the Sohioans boasting the leading scorer of the league in Al Stickler, and the Supplies not far behind with their high scoring center Dave Shelley.

In the second game at 8:30, the Ohio Seamless Tube of Shelby and the Yuncker Brother Sports tangle in a game that is a 'do or die' situation. Both teams have been defeated once in the second round and therefore the loser of this game is automatically eliminated, while the winner will remain in the fight for the Championship. In light of these circumstances, both teams will really be in there pitching.

BUTTERMORE SIGNED

Jack Buttermore, All-Ohio cager from Ohio Wesleyan, will appear with the Athletic Supplies in their City league game at the high school tonight and will finish the season with the team, management of the quintet announced today. Buttermore won All-Ohio high school honors two years, and all-state tournament selection once while at Massillon, and has been named on All-Ohio college squads for two years. Only five-feet, eight-inches, Buttermore plays the pivot position.

Tygers On A-P Lists

Few Mansfield Opponents Win State Ranking on Wire Service Poll.

JACK SHIPLET, clever dribbling Mansfield Tyger guard, and Dick Burkholder, nimble forward, today were named on the honor list of the Associated Press All-Ohio high school basketball squad.

The Tyger record for the season, which now stands at 10 victories and as many defeats, just about eliminated Coach Vern Hoffman's hoopsters from consideration on the first three state quintets, but the value of Shiplet and Burkholder was not overlooked by coaches of Mansfield's opponents in casting their votes.

* * *

Only Glenn Barker of New Philadelphia among Mansfield's opponents made the first team, but Tom Carnes of Canton McKinley and Eugene Fekete, Findlay, placed at guard on the second quintet, and Horace Gillom, the "Mighty Man of Massillon," won the third team center post.

The All-Ohio selections:

Third team—Robert Mason, Norwood, and John Skolnicki, Lorain, forwards; Horace Gillom, Massillon, center, Mark Lohr, Logan and R. McGarvey, Bellefontaine, guards.

FATHER HEARS SENTENCE ON TORTURE COUNT

Ashlander Sentenced to Four Months In Workhouse After Jury Finds Him Guilty.

ASHLAND—Judge H. E Culbertson sentenced Earl Hartley to serve four months in the Toledo workhouse Monday afternoon after a common pleas court found him guilty of torturing his two sons, Earl and Richard.

The father admitted he had burned the fingers of his two sons but stated he had done it to teach them not to play with matches He testified that he had found burned matches about the house and that the boys stated they had used the matches to light their way to the cellar instead of using electric lights, when they went to get some apples.

When questioned, Hartley said his father had burned his fingers for playing with matches and stated that it had cured him. He said he had had trouble with Earl before and that he had set the house afire by starting a fire in the coal bucket. "I didn't know anything else to do for I couldn't do anything with them," he said. "I didn't intend to injure them. The only thing I wanted was to be sure they left matches alone," he stated.

Hartley claimed he did not think the fingers were badly burned and that he had never examined them. He said that Richard had picked the skin off his fingers but he did not think they had been blistered.

Witnesses testifying about the condition of the boys' fingers when they were brought to probate court were Deputy Sheriff Kaylor, Deputy Sheriff Rickenbrod, Major R. W. Amore of the Salvation Army, William G. McKee, and Dr. R P Bogniard. Probate Judge S. H Boffenmyer who was to have been a witness for the state was absent from the city during the morning.

Defense Council J L. Mason contended that there must be evidence of malice in order to obtain conviction and that there was no evidence of malice. "The testimony wholly fails to establish any of the elements of criminal offense," he stated.

BRIEF UPWARD STOCK SURGE BEATEN BACK

Attempt to Follow Through on Monday's Rally Hits Difficulties.

NEW YORK —(AP)— The stock market today tried to follow through on Monday's rally but ran into difficulties after a brief forward tilt at the start.

Among early resistant issues were American Telephone, Western Union, Consolidated Edison, North American, J. I. Case, and Glenn Martin.

Commodities lost some of their Monday's buoyancy. Bonds maintained a steady course.

Some customers displayed an inclination to cash in on the previous day's bulge.

Market encouragement was found in the statement of federal reserve member banks in 101 cities disclosing the 23rd consecutive weekly upturn in loans to commerce, industry and agriculture.

Those watching building material company shares noted predictions in this field that industrial construction activity, already at peak levels, probably would pick up further momentum.

War Will End In Stalemate

out against Germany until the German people realize it is impossible to defeat Britain and are willing to conclude a reasonable and honorable peace.

Unless American aid to Britain should be extended to include manpower as well as materials, it is felt this country's help will not be sufficient to assure a decisive British military victory.

On the question of manpower, there does not appear to be the slightest disposition in administration quarters from the president down to consider the possibility of sending an American army to Europe to help Britain defeat Germany. On the contrary, American officials generally appear vigorously opposed to any such move.

In the first place, it is felt that with Germany in control of the European continent, it would be a prolonged, costly and highly dangerous venture to send an American expeditionary force abroad. There would be no sense in sending any large American force to England, it was said, because it would be just as difficult for an Anglo-American force to cross the English channel to France as it is expected to prove for the Germans to cross to England.

An American land offensive against Germany in Europe would have to be made through the Mediterranean area, either via Italy or the Balkans. With Germany now in control of Italy and about to fortify the Balkan mountains, authoritative quarters believed it would prove a costly and questionable venture to try to break through that European back-door.

It is the firm conviction that no American army will be sent to Europe that leads to the belief the European conflict will end in a negotiated peace. If Great Britain, with American material aid, is able to hold out the next six months against German invasion attempts, it is believed the war eventually will be terminated by a compromise peace.

However, it is considered highly probable that it may take another year, or even two, before both sides become reconciled to the realization that the war is a stalemate; that the present German army is supreme on the European continent and the British navy is unbeatable on the sea.

Once both sides became reconciled to this view, and realize continuation of the war is leading only to general chaos with Communism the likely victor, it is believed they will be willing to talk peace.

HEROISM ACTS IN BOMBING OF CAFE REVEALED

Champagne Used to Sterilize Wounds of Scores of Those In London Cabaret.

(By International News Service)

LONDON — As Nazi raiders swept over England in sporadic new attacks, the full story of heroism in London's bombed-out Cafe De Paris on Piccadilly last Saturday night came to light for the first time.

Recipient of unstinted praise was Helen Stevens, a pretty brunet physiotherapist of Dunnville, Ont., who worked for over an hour among the dead and dying, using champagne to sterilize wounds and tearing tablecloths for emergency bandages.

More than a score of persons were killed in the famous cabaret which was long one of the favorite haunts of the Duke of Windsor. The interior of the place was wrecked when a huge bomb demolished the cocktail bar and dance floor.

Miss Stevens, who is attached to the Canadian general hospital, was at the Cafe De Paris with a party of Canadians which included Nurse Thelma Stewart of Toronto and Lieutenants Jack Clunnie and Jack Wright of Sarnia, Ont.

When the bomb fell, Miss Stewart and Wright were dancing while Miss Stevens and Clunnie were sitting it out on a balcony table.

"The whole place filled right up with smoke and fumes," Miss Stevens said today.

"We all thought it was gas at first.

"I could see Lieutenant Wright shielding Miss Stewart from the exploding bomb and splinters of glass. He died protecting her."

Aided by Clunnie and an unidentified doctor in the uniform of the Polish army, Miss Stevens worked through the wild excitement to do what she could to alleviate suffering. As the wounded called for help, she walked among them with sequestered champagne bottles to use as an antiseptic.

After 1 a. m. in London night clubs, drinks can only be ordered by the bottle and everyone takes champagne. With the aid of this and splints hastily improvised from shattered chairs and tables she succeeded in giving first aid to many persons who otherwise might have died.

$12,282 RELIEF FUND RECEIVED

State Keeps Promise to Pay Half of Expenses; Check For 1940 Money Sent.

The state had kept its promise today to reimburse cities and counties for half of their 1940 relief expenditures, distributing a total of $12,282 to Richland county, Mansfield, and Shelby to make up for the times last year when the state failed to pay its share of the cost.

The funds were made available under a bill passed recently by the state legislature, providing for matching of all relief expenditures on a 50-50 basis. In the future the state will pay half of the relief costs.

In the allocation today, Mansfield received $5,818; Richland county, $5,469, and Shelby, $995.

The three relief areas may use the money for the current poor relief expenses or to pay old bills held over from last year.

Allocations to other counties and cities in the Mansfield area included:

Ashland county, $4,562; Holmes county, $2,746; Huron county, $4,064; Morrow county, $1,538; Bucyrus, $2,977; Galion, $1,094, and Norwalk, $829.

GOOD NEWS!

for POULTRY and all LIVESTOCK

Even your CHICKENS and LIVESTOCK will be glad to hear about this.

It's good news for them as well as for you!

We have just been appointed the distributor for Pratts Poultry and Livestock Feeds in Mansfield, Ohio.

There's a dollar and cents value to you in that fact.

Pratt Feeds are made by people who know their business. They started making feeds years ago, before most of us were born, and everybody who ever used Pratts will tell you it makes profits from eggs and milk a lot larger than will other feeds.

Yet, actually, PRATTS doesn't cost a cent more than many just ordinary feeds.

Get acquainted with PRATTS and the larger profits it will bring you. Come in and let's talk things over, whether you need feed or not. We can help you in lots of ways.

BUT WE'D NEVER HAVE APPREHENDED THE MAN, COLONEL CAREY, IF IT HADN'T BEEN FOR MR. ROSS WHO GAVE ME THE LIFT AND TRAILED THIS MAN WHO LOOKS LIKE DAVID !
WHEN THIS MAN CAME OUT OF THE APARTMENT HE HAD A TRAVELING BAG; MAYBE HE WAS ABOUT TO LEAVE TOWN! MR. ROSS SAID HE WAS VERY INDIGNANT THAT THE F.B.I. MEN DEMANDED HE GO WITH THEM

OF COURSE HIS LOOKING SO MUCH LIKE DAVID IS REALLY NO REASON TO SUSPECT HIM, WITHOUT OTHER EVIDENCE – BUT IT'S THE VERY THEORY DAVID AND THE BUREAU HAD BEEN WORKING ON !

AMAZING! - WELL, THEY'LL HAVE A HARD TIME CONVICTING EITHER ONE OF THEM THEN WITHOUT MORE DIRECT EVIDENCE !

CAMP SHELBY CLAIMS RANK AS 2ND CITY

Jackson Capital Only Larger Mississippi Community, Figures Show.

(By United Press)

CAMP SHELBY, Miss — This bulging settlement of soldiers in the heart of the Mississippi scrub pine country is still called a camp, but population figures show it has become the second largest community in Mississippi.

Only the state capital, Jackson, surpasses Camp Shelby where a daily stream of draft soldiers has swelled the population count to 35,000. Jackson has 61,000 Meridian, with 31 000 inhabitants has dropped to third place.

Hattiesburg with 21,240 people must now be classed as a suburb of the army camp.

Trains and trucks from Ohio, Indiana, West Virginia and Kentucky are dumping soldiers in by the hundreds every day as trainees come from Ohio and the 38th division of the national guard rolls in from the Buckeye state's neighbors.

But Camp Shelby, like every other boom town developed growing pains.

The traffic problem is the sorest spot.

Military police are clamping down on speeders in a determined drive to reduce the smash-ups which have been occurring regularly on camp streets

Captain John Rae, Columbus, head of the police, proudly reported 25 speeding arrests during a recent week-end, and he says he'll put the whole camp in the clink if necessary to obtain strict attention to speed regulations.

Most of the heavy-footed offenders have been truck drivers, a few soldiers, none have been officers, according to Captain Rae

Traffic sentence for truck drivers consists of the loss of his vehicle for 12 hours and with most of the gravel trucks being paid by the truck-load this is not considered a lenient punishment.

Traffic got off to a fast start here because police lacked equipment to enforce regulations But 28 motorcycles have now been ordered and the roads are expected to be patrolled closely from now on

The original Mississippi mud roads through which cars and trucks slithered have now been replaced by scores of hard roads which make higher speeds possible.

A gravel truck traveling at 50 miles an hour smashed into a station wagon carrying seven soldiers recentl, and sent them all to the hospital There are many collisions in which cars are smashed without the occupants being injured.

Speed limits of 30 miles for passenger cars and 25 miles for trucks inside the reservation have been prescribed. Orders have been issued to military vehicles to keep below 35 miles an hour on the road between camp and Hattiesburg. A few observe it.

Mississippi has no speed limit on state highways and the new roads are expertly constructed with speeds of 70 and 80 miles an hour easily attainable.

City Ordinance Puts Courthouse Janitor In Court

Anton Moritz of 30 Boughton avenue custodian of the Richland county courthouse today was charged with violation of the city s plumbing code.

When Moritz was arraigned before Judge G E. Kalbfleisch this morning his attorney, John C O'Donnell asked the court for a continuance.

Judge Kalbfleisch set the hearing date for Wednesday, April 2, after City Solicitor M D. Ward jr., did not object to the continuance.

Moritz is charged by Fred Haag, city plumbing inspector, with having installed two water heaters in the basement of the county jail. Haag said that Moritz has no plumbing license and violated the city's code.

Attorney O'Donnell asked the continuance to allow him to study the charge against his client and to examine the plumbing code

No plea would be made today O'Donnell stated because he might wish to ask a demurrer to evidence submitted by the city.

CHAPTER XXX.

Nancy had delayed looking at her letters until she had a few minutes she could call her own. Entering her room, the girl locked the door and drew the window shade.

She read first the letter from Marcla and could not understand it. But after she had twice read the second letter, from her uncle, she sat very still in her darkened room. Still and white-faced and numb with shock.

Incredible though it seemed, she had been branded thief. Pauline's securities missing, as well as those belonging to Nancy and her sisters Elizabeth and Jane; circumstantial evidence pointing straight to Nancy!

She imagined herself thrown into jail; she shuddered. As Uncle Bill said, she must stay in hiding until—until . . . How long must this masquerade go on? Until the real thief was caught and Nancy's own name was cleared. But when if ever would that be.

"If only I still had my own stocks and bonds," she choked aloud. "I'd send them to Pauline and tell her to take them in place of those she lost. But I can't do even that much now. Uncle says Pauline's were stolen the same night I went away. And there was no clue to show that any one except me had been in the house."

Abruptly shes prang to her feet, washed the tears from her cheeks and eyes, combed her hair and stepped out into the kitchen. Ike Skittles was taking his afternoon nap, so no one watched the girl thrust both letters into the kitchen range.

Had some one besides Barclay already seen them? Not likely. He seemed to be playing this unusual and crooked game alone.

Tony also was playing his game alone. How had Tony learned even as much as he had?

Suddenly the girl, watching the letters burn in the stove, found the answer. She nodded her tawny head. "That's the way of it! Two can play at this contemptible game of opening letters. Tony got his information before ever he proposed to Roberta and told her he knew who she was! From Uncle Bill's letter he also learned about Don Sturgis and the 'J.W.S.' billfold."

Nancy set the lid back on the stove and walked unhurriedly across the yard to Cabin Number One. Spikes driven into the wall behind the door answered for a clothes closet, and hanging from one of these was the suit Nancy Eleanor Smith wore the night she left Philadelphia. Her slender hand dipped into one pocket after another of that suit and finally brought forth a small hard object, which to the girl's bitter disappointment proved to be only a button—a button from one of Pauline's coats.

Nancy sank down on Roberta's bed, her body limp, in memory reviewing that fateful night in Philadelphia when after having turned out all lights, she was leaving the Smythe house. On the soft hall rug her foot had encountered some small object. She had picked this up hastily and slipped it into a pocket of her suit. There it had lain forgotten until the astounding news from Uncle Bill had brought it to mind.

She had hoped this something she found that night might prove that she had not been alone in the Smythe house; she had even dared to hope that it would prove to be a clue leading to the thief who had really stolen Pauline's securities. But these hopes had now vanished. She had tried to save that which the three Smith girls had inherited from their father, and she had failed. Failed miserably. What would now be the fate of Elizabeth and Jane? What would Uncle Bill say to Nancy when he learned the whole truth?

Oblivious to the passing of time, the troubled girl sat in Cabin Number One completely absorbed in her own thoughts. Thoughts which no matter how far afield they wandered always came back to center around one man now on the T Slash ranch: a man who knew all about her, and her family as well; a man who was trying to blackmail her; a man who must had some good reason for stealing Cinders Malloy's ragged shirt; a man who for some odd reason continued to carry a broken watch fob dangling on a strap from his trousers watch pocket.

"A luck piece, maybe," Nancy wondered, realizing that many crooks, and others too, set great store on luck pieces.

"Well, Barclay's luck is running high," she added. "And as yet I can see no way of trapping him."

Squaring her shoulders, she stepped out of the cabin. Flash Taylor with his party of guests had already come trooping noisily home, and no matter how Nancy Eleanor felt, supper must be on the table on time.

Nancy missed Gabby at the after-supper chore of dishwashing; Gabby with his incessant chatter and songs and enthusiasm. However Bronc Peters and Cinders appeared, and although the girl didn't know it, the presence of these two young men was all that prevented Barclay from annoying her. Yet Cinders was too glum and preoccupied to be good company and Bronc could not have talked entertainingly had he wanted to talk.

Later Nancy stood in the dark by the window of her room watching the lights go out at the bunkhouse, at the guest cabins and finally at the Lodge. How quiet it was with only the musical murmur of Jim Creek to break the silence. She would love it here among these great silent mountains if only she could free herself of worry and of haunting fear.

Some one was crossing the yard as silently as a ghost. It was Barclay. He stopped at Nancy's window and tapped on the glass.

Nancy said, "What now?"

The man answered, "At seven tomorrow morning I'll be ready to drive to town. You'll go with me to send that wire to J. W. Smith or I'll spill the beans."

"You're sure you can spill any beans?" Nancy heard herself ask. "Can I? I'll tell them all who you are and of the robbery job you pulled off in Philly. I'll tell them who Cinders Malloy really is. I'll prove that he robbed your uncle; prove that you, Nancy Eleanor Smith, picked Sheriff Crowder's pocket and that later you stole Kirk Maxwell's manuscript and pictures."

"Prove?" asked Nancy pointedly.

"Don't you ever think I won't pin the deadwood on your friend Sturgis."

Something tingled Nancy's nerves. The man was so sure he could "pin the deadwood" on Don Sturgis.

"After all that, you'll take me back to my stepmother who employed you to find me?"

"I'm not sure. I think the Jimtown jail will be a good place for you to think things over while you're waiting for officers from Philadelphia. The experience will be, well, humiliating to a girl of your standing. Mister Donald Sturgis will be occupying the next cell, if that'll be any comfort. But remember, I've told you how to avoid trouble for yourself and him, too. I'll see you at seven o'clock tomorrow morning. Good night, Miss Smith."

After a few moments Nancy murmured, "I'm afraid my dreams will be unpleasant. . . . Tony's a mere piker compared to that grafter!"

But strange to say she slept soundly and well, all unaware how during this same night, while the T Slash ranch also slept, a hefty man in a very shabby and very dirty suit, a grimy man with whisker stubble on his cheeks and bloodshot eyes under a soiled brown cap, stole furtively across the Jim Creek bridge into the yard at the T Slash. A certain automobile parked near the Lodge was his objective.

He dreaded the noise of starting the car, but no one on the T Slash seemed to take alarm when the motor began to purr. Nor was there any sound to indicate pursuit when the darkly clad man eased the car across the bridge and took the road leading to Jimtown—and points east. Heavy, erstwhile pal of Smoothie Dick, was heading for home!

Westward through the night an airplane came flying. It circled the landing field at Dagger Wash and dropped. "Here you are, sir," said the pilot to John William Smith.

"But where's 'here'?" demanded John William. "I told you to put me down at the T Slash ranch near Jimtown. Tsose buildings yonder look like a town to me."

"Sorry, sir, but I can't land anywhere in those mountains near Jimtown. Those buildings ranch you mention. You'll have to take an auto from here on, Mr. Smith."

"All right. All right! Here's a ten-spot for you, young man, though, you didn't get me here near as quick as your company promised. Where'll I get an auto? If there's a taxi here, this one-store, one-hotel, twenty-one-saloon sample of all cow towns has changed a heap since I was in this part of the world."

"Thank you, sir. We'll go to the office."

Eventually Smith was piloted to the home of Halfaday Hank, where the impatient traveler promptly routed the veteran stage driver out of bed.

Sure, Halfaday would take on the job, but his car was "half took to pieces." He'd been grinding the vales, and it would take him an hour to put it together again. Why not wait for daylight. What was all this yank?"

"Get at it by artificial light," ordered J. W. sternly. "Here's a good reason why you should Halfaday," flourishing a twenty-dollar bill. "Say, when we reach Jimtown you're to pick up Sheriff Chalk Crowder."

When Hank finally had his stage car ready to take the road, he insisted upon stopping at the telegraph office.

"You see, Mr. Smith, there's some right important folks out to Perriwell's T Slash, and a jigger name of Waller has sent a heap o' wires. He's secretary to the folks whose girl—worth a million dollars on the hoof—is out there. I drive her over to Jimtown special, not on my regular trip, and she's the niftiest little package of a lady—"

"Think she's all right, do you, Halfaday? So do I. Get your telegrams and let's roll. Let's roll!"

However John William could not hasten Halfaday Hank. He slouched into the telegraph office and slouched out again. "Nothin' for Miss Lou ner any other dudes. Just one telegram for Roberta Rowland. She's the hired girl out there."

But Halfaday Hank, upon nearing the T Slash ranch, cocked one eye back at his snoring passenger on the wide rear seat and mused, "I'm s'picious of that old jasper. Acts kinda nutty to me. He can just keep on snoozin' till I see what's what."

Old Sol Perriwell awakened at break of day and all at once realized something had been disturbing his sleep the whole night long; a nebulous worry over what the sam hill had become of that New York paper he hadn't read.

A few minutes later Sol stood in his son's room gazing down at the weak, yet cunning face of Anthony Thomas Perriwell, and the old ranchman screwed his own features into a wry, knotty grimace. Nature had played a mean trick on him and Ruth Perriwell. It didn't seem right somehow. But they had had to make the best of it . . . W-e-l-l, if that rich girl would just marry Tony and take him 'way off some place; far far away—

"'Twon't never happen," grunted old Sol, shaking his bald head. "The dang cub was lyin' to me. 'Tain't possible any girl who's had advantages would accept that worthless, sly pup a snoozin' there."

With unwonted roughness he shook Tony wide awake. "Hey you! I jus' figgered out you must ha' run off with that paper I was 'bout to read yesterday. Where is it?"

Tony gave the matter thought before he replied, mysteriously. "You're just as well learn what's what now as later. That newspaper's at Kirk Maxwell's cabin. You can tell him I said 'twas hunky for you to see it now."

"Tell that dude it's hunky for me to see my own newspaper? By dogies, I should say it is! . . . Get up and do somethin', you damn shiftless cub. Ma's slavin' on this job and how're you helpin' her?"

"Ha-ha-ha—! How're you helping her yourself? . . . Lemme 'lone."

Sol snapped his fingers wrathfully, helplessly, and ineffectually as usual. That was the way it went. Whenever he reproached or upbraided Tony for not working, Tony retorted in kind. Still fuming, the ranchman found himself at Kirk Maxwell's cabin before it occurred to him no guest would care to be disturbed at this hour, when the glarious pink of a newborn day was beautifying the farther peaks behind the old ranch and slowly creeping down bald ridges and darkly forested slopes.

Old Sol took notice of Slim Cummings sauntering from the bunkhouse toward the stable to wrangle the cavy; took notice of smoke lifting from the high stovepipe at the cookhouse to announce that Ike Skittles had started his breakfast fire. Plumb good old man, old Ike, reliable as a faithful horse except only when he went on a hell-bender, got drunker'n seven hundred dollars, and blowed in all his wages. Sol wet his lips reminiscently. Some party, that last time when he and other old-timers, conivivial souls all, had joined Ike Skittles.

Kirk Maxwell's door was suddenly thrown open. Turning, Sol saw the lanky, Roman-nosed tenderfoot with a gun in his hand, glaring at him.

"Ho! You!" said Maxwell curtly and put the gun in his hip pocket. "Excuse the rod, but I was ready for any thief who'd come skulking around my cabin again. Got my new article and new pictures wrapped and ready to go. This time I wasn't taking chances of losing the stuff."

"That's bully . . . By the way, Tony said 'twould be hunky for me to see that New York paper."

"He really did? . . . Come in, Sol. Here it is. Look at the page that's folded out." Maxwell walked to the window at the far end of the cabin and waited for the reaction of "ye genial host of the T Slash Dude Ranch."

"Maxwell! Maxwell!" Sol's voice strongly resembled that of a crow. "If these pictures is right, and they must be—must be—who in hell is that girl?"

JUDGE PAROLES FIVE YOUTHS IN THEFT SERIES

Ordered to Report to Shelby Police Chief, One Receives Suspended Sentence.

Two of five youths taken into custody by Sheriff Frank E. Robinson over the week-end as suspects in a series of burglaries in northern Richland county were paroled to Police Chief Leroy Coffey of Shelby for a month yesterday by Judge Stuart H. Cramer in juvenile court. Another was given a suspended sentence in the Boys' Industrial school at Lancaster.

Judge Cramer said the other two youths, both over 18, would be turned over to Shelby authorities since most of the burglaries were in the Shelby area.

Sentenced to the industrial school was a 17-year-old Shelby boy, a second offender. Juvenile court records showed he had been in court several months ago on a theft charge.

"This is his last chance, and the next time he comes into this court, the suspension will be revoked and he will go to Lancaster," Judge Cramer said.

The other juveniles, 16 and 17 years old, admitted they had been with the other boys, but there was nothing to indicate they had stolen anything, Judge Cramer said. They must report on their conduct weekly for one month to Chief Coffey.

A part of the loot allegedly stolen by the 17-year-old youth and the two older boys was recovered near Shelby and Shiloh by Ralph Carroll, county juvenile officer. It included batteries, auto horns, radios, gasoline, and a number of other articles taken from garages and homes.

SEEK TRANSFER

Springfield Trustees Asking Court O. K. on Fund Shift.

Seeking funds to finance their 1941 road and bridge program, Springfield township trustees had filed a request in common pleas court today for authority to transfer $5,000 from the township general fund and $3.11 from the bond retirement fund to the road and bridge fund.

The state board of tax appeals has already granted permission for the transfer from the general fund, but Judge C. H. Huston must give the final approval.

Trustees stated in their request that they have only $2,918 in their road and bridge fund, not enough to finance the cost of the highway program they have planned.

The $5,003.11 is unencumbered in the general and bond retirement funds, they said.

Intensified Warfare Promised

WHILE the United States is moving determinedly toward greater aid for Britain and the other embattled democracies, spokesmen for the Axis powers reiterate what is already well known—that they will make every possible effort to prevent shipments from reaching the British Isles.

Nor need there have been a restatement of the Axis view that this is an "unfriendly act" by the United States, "a move toward war," or that this country is now regarded as a "definite belligerent."

The position of the United States has been quite clear for some time and the predominant public sentiment favorable to aiding Britain has naturally carried a strong implication of opposition to the methods employed by Hitler in gaining temporary mastery over weaker European nations.

Defeat of Hitlerism, and the totalitarian policies which that word represents, is now becoming recognized as just as important to the United States, and to all the countries of the Western Hemisphere, as it is to Great Britain and the temporarily helpless small independent nations of Europe.

Future events, not present predictions, will determine the part that the United States must eventually play in contributing its share to the main objective of this war—the ultimate defeat of the Axis powers, restoration of sane government in Europe and assurance to small nations that they can peacefully pursue their various courses toward self-betterment and in friendly relations with other nations of the world.

The coming weeks and months will bring an intensification of warfare around the British Isles, in the Balkans, and possibly in the Far East. From now on the United States is destined to play an increasingly important part in the war—with its full support thrown on the side of Great Britain and the other nations aligned against the Axis powers.

The extent to which this aid can be made effective may become an important factor in determining how soon peace will be restored. There can be no peace while Hitler rules Europe, or while his threat of world domination continues.

Ohio Traffic Toll Grows

FOR EACH of the past two week-ends more than a score of traffic fatalities have occurred in Ohio. Nearest to Mansfield of these highway disasters was that in which three young people were killed Sunday, several miles east of Wooster.

Since the tragic occurrences of the March 1 week-end, in which two persons met death within a few hours in the Mansfield area, this immediate territory has been free from traffic fatalities and highway patrolmen have commented on the apparent inclination of many motorists to drive more carefully.

It has been common experience to note reduction of speed and less reckless driving immediately after one or more serious accidents, but this influence seems to wear off within a few hours and traffic law violations are quickly resumed.

The number of violators arrested over the week-end in Mansfield and vicinity, for a variety of offenses, indicates the need for constant vigilance by state highway patrolmen and city police officers to apprehend dangerous drivers BEFORE they cause an accident, rather than afterward.

Those Mountain Monuments

GUTZON BORGLUM proved that bold imagination in carving and building has not vanished from the world. In an age supposedly dull-minded, commercial, and scientific rather than artistic, he created in the Black Hills of South Dakota a work of art comparable to the Egyptian Pyramids, and likely to last as long.

Future ages may rate it as the greatest monument of our time. We can imagine members of some future civilization standing at the foot of those carved cliffs, as far from us in time as we are from the Greeks who built the Colossus of Rhodes, and saying "There were giants in those days."

The faces of Washington, Jefferson and Lincoln, recognized as the greatest of our national leaders, look out from that mountain-top at the nation they carved. The face of Theodore Roosevelt, who himself knew and loved those hills, will be completed by Borglum's pupils. Later, no doubt, will appear others judged worthy by new generations.

Those beautiful mountains, with their shadowy forests, their cliffs and waterfalls, rising magically from the plains, will be a mecca of many generations of Americans.

Leipzig's Dwindling Fair

THE ANNUAL FAIR in Leipzig, Germany, which has been operating for 700 years, has some interesting novelties this year. It features, for example, wooden bedsprings, flexible glass and a gent's necktie with a built-in zipper purse.

There are more than 6,000 other things, but these somehow seem especially interesting to an American. Just how do they make a wooden bedspring? And how come that bent glass won't break? As for the necktie with a built-in zipper purse, it can't really be of much use to Germans just now.

But there are few Americans visiting that fair, and no Americans at all exhibiting products there. Its scope has shrunk greatly.

Come to think of it, aren't fairs vanishing from the world in general? There may be some local fairs in this country and some international fairs in Latin-America. But the trend is against them. Wars and fairs don't jibe. Fairs are signs of civilization and flourish only in peace time.

He Was a Barkeep

—By ELSIE ROBINSON

MY FRIEND just died. Perhaps you wouldn't have approved of him as a friend, for he was a barkeep. But he had been many other things besides. Indeed, I doubt if there was a trade he had not dabbled in, for he was a born adventurer at heart. But the greatest adventure to him was always human life.

Dark, smiling, lolling against a sunny wall on his very elegant legs, punctuating his husky, laughing discourse with his tapering, powerful hands . . . and puncturing your favorite hooey with a flash of his handsome black eyes . . . he was the very symbol of the old West which he so loved and had claimed as his own.

That love of life—of frank, easy going, Western life, in particular—was the thing you felt first and last in him. You could not come near him without being warmed by it. Of all the men I have known—wise and foolish, strong and weak—he revelled in life most deeply. He did not try to analyze it or pass judgment upon it. He took it as simply as a child, as a great and glorious gift . . . a cause for everlasting rejoicing.

I have seen him stand over a bubbling pot of polenta, that Italian dish of boiled corn meal with mushroom sauce which puts to shame the greatest French culinary masterpiece. All day the meal and the sauce must simmer if they are to be brought to perfection. And all day my friend would bend above the fragrant steam, laughing, rejoicing, as if at a fiesta . . . feeling to the full the savor of that simple incident.

The fragrance and heartiness of a dish of polenta . . . the tawny flight of a young buck through the chapparal . . . the burning blue of a California sky above bronzed oaks . . . the clotted honey of the first, fresh figs . . . the very smell and feel of the red, mountain soil—all these he loved in every portion and made a part of his own self. Never have I seen a human who felt the whole of life so deeply. Yet, as I've said, his greatest joy lay in human beings.

There was no profit motive in that joy. Of all he earned, in his widely varied projects, he must have given even more for the sake of a smile . . . or as a comfort to grief. He had an uncanny instinct that way. You might hide your trouble from the shrewdest eye on earth but you never got beyond his instant comprehension.

Mind you, he made no fuss about it. A gay, white flash of smile against his velvet bronze . . . a stiff, short drink of Scotch if you were liquor minded . . . or just a wisecrack, and your heart felt healed. And if the hurt went deeper, then he'd give you all he had. I've known him to toss a right good job aside and spend weeks in a home where pain had hit. Not asking anything for all the time he'd lost. Not ever preaching or offering advice. Just sprawling in a chair or slouching by a stove. Yet, somehow, warming every breath that moved your broken heart . . . and giving you fresh hope to face the trail again.

They say he was a barkeep—and alcohol, some people claim, is poison. But there's more deadly poison than ever came across a bar, and that's the poison of unkindliness. And never did I see a drop of that in anything he dealt. He'd chuckle over human cussedness, including his own and yours, but never did his word stab any man in the back. And always there lay welcome in his hands and heart for any lonely stranger who came by his way.

I know not what the moralists may say. I only know the world is cold today because my friend is gone. . . . And I'll walk humbler all my life, for having known his courage and his unfailing kindness.

Daily Bible Thought

Neither is there salvation in any other: for there is none other name under heaven given men, whereby we must be saved.—Acts 4:12.

This Is Ohio

SIMON KENTON, frontiersman and Indian fighter, had most of his hazardous but thrilling adventure in what is now Ohio, and for more than 35 years was a resident of the state.

After retrieving some stolen horses from the Shawnee town near Xenia he was pursued to the Ohio river and captured. Eight times compelled to run the gantlet and three times tied to the stake for burning, he was successively reprieved. Taken to Detroit he was held by the British under close watch but, on the night of June 3, 1779, escaped. In 1780 and in 1782 he scouted for general George Rogers Clark in Ohio. Kenton settled near the present site of Springfield in 1799. Some three years later he moved to Urbana and about 1820 he moved about five miles north of Zanesville, Logan county.

Something About Coffee Drinking.

—By DR. CLENDENING

I WATCHED them loading the coffee bags on my ship at Santos, Brazil, last week—endless streams of men disappearing into the hold of the ship, for hours and hours—and I wondered how it was ever going to be all used up.

The war has made us think of what the real basic necessities of life are—there must be thousands of families in Europe finding by bitter experience what they can do without—and I suppose coffee cannot be counted as one of the absolute necessities. Certainly, I imagine, many of those European citizens are finding they can get along without it. And certainly South America is finding a very grave financial problem on its hands with its large export trade of coffee in Germany and Central Europe cut off.

But in ordinary times coffee is certainly pretty close to a necessity. In the United States it is one of the basic commodities for which we are dependent on other countries. We consume half again as much coffee per capita as we did forty years ago. I have no very late figures available, but in 1930 we imported 1,599,316,550 pounds, of which more than a billion pounds came from Brazil.

For many people the question arises not as to whether coffee is a necessity, but whether it is a menace. The human race is so constituted that sooner or later if a number of people do something habitually that is not actually a physical requirement of the body, somebody is bound to spread the rumor that it is injurious.

A Stimulant.

We have expressed our opinions about coffee several times in this column. It undoubtedly has certain pharmacological actions. These are well known and can be definitely measured. It stimulates the brain, the heart, and the kidneys, largely by increasing the blood supply going through them. So does exercise. In proper amounts, coffee is no more harmful than exercise. Indeed, if it came to the question of carrying one or the other too far I should be inclined to think that excessive exercise is responsible for more harm than coffee. True, in excessive amounts it perhaps overstimulates the brain and leads to insomnia and nervousness, but this, too, is well known.

Certainly it seems hard to call it anything but an innocent habit when you see the Brazilians sitting at their sidewalk cafes drinking little cups of coffee one after another, all day long. I wouldn't go so far as to recommend this dosage but I must say they looked very healthy and happy.

Timely Editorial

Save the Birds!

Madame Frances Perkins, secretary of labor, favors hats of a severe and unvarying type. Most of us are aware that many fine women prefer headgear like that.

On the other hand, First Lady Eleanor Roosevelt has hat ideas of another familiar sort. She likes variety, grace of line, the well-chosen adornment.

Well, women's hats are their business, designed like a battleship or not. We have but one flat edict—no plumage the price of which, besides money, was a beautiful bird's life!—Detroit News.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

America First Committee Active To the End In Opposing Aid Bill

—By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

WASHINGTON—How closely the America First committee has been working behind the scenes with the senate isolationists in opposing the lend-lease bill is indicated by some of the committee's recent correspondence.

For instance, Mrs. Burton K. Wheeler, wife of the senator and a leading member of the America First committee, received a telegram last month from Robert L. Bliss, one of the committee's staff, in which he said:

"Please have Senator Wheeler send congratulatory wire to Tudor Gardiner, jr., chairman America First committee meeting Symphony hall Boston 8 p. m., General Hugh Johnson speaking. (Signed) Robert L. Bliss."

One of the most interesting efforts to influence public opinion was in regard to the March of Time, the newsreel produced by Henry R. Luce, publisher of Time, Life, and Fortune. Apparently the America First Committee planned to crack down on The March of Time through Will Hays, czar of the motion picture industry; for on February 5 a memo signed "R.L.B." (presumably Robert L. Bliss) was addressed to Dr. Dwyer and R. Douglas Stuart of the America First staff, as follows:

"My idea on the March of Time letter for Will Hays would be something along the line that the March of Time is presented as a feature news editorial service to movie-goers. Many people, depending on the authenticity of what they see and the deductions drawn in the editorializing by the commentator, can be misled, and the March of Time is being used at present as a dangerous propaganda machine to get us into the war . . . .

"I'd let loose on this thing and lambast the hell out of it, indicating that it is a profit-making propaganda machine for Luce, who evidently saw that the margin of profit and enterprise in publishing right now was in being on the side that wanted to get us into the war, because that is what people read because of its sensational scare value."

Bill Bullitt's "Pals."

BEST barometer of how the state department boys love each other was the recent report that Myron Taylor, U. S. envoy to the Vatican, would resign.

Immediately cropped up a flood of rumors that William C. Bullitt, ex-ambassador to France and close friend of the president, would be the new envoy to the Vatican.

Actually, there was nothing to it—except that almost everyone in the state department, anxious to get close-friend Bullitt away from the president's dinner table, chorused: "The Vatican is just the place for Bill! We must send him there!"

Roosevelt's Health.

PROBABLY no president of the United States since Teddy Roosevelt has come through two terms in office in such good physical shape as F. D. R.

The president has aged somewhat. His hair is thinner and grayer. Tell-tale lines on his face testify to the wear and tear of domestic and international crises. However, his energy, his resiliency, his ability to take work in his stride, have not changed.

Secret of the president's general good health is the fact that he changes pace by getting away to Hyde Park and on fishing cruises. When he is in Washington, probably the biggest boon to his health is the green-tiled swimming pool located between the executive offices and the residential part of the White House.

There, when the grind of the day's conferences is over, the president tries to spend half an hour swimming, usually with Harry Hopkins, a member of the cabinet, or on occasion a juvenile guest whom Mrs. Roosevelt has invited to the White House.

The president is not a particularly good swimmer. He employs a cross between an overhand stroke and the well-known "dog paddle," and propels himself entirely with his arms. When he turns over on his back, however, there is a big improvement, and his powerfully built chest and shoulders make him the equal of the average back-stroke swimmer.

After the dip, the president takes a shower, followed by a rub-down given him by George Fox, assistant to White House physician Dr. Ross McIntire, after which he is ready for dinner and long nights of work in the Lincoln study.

Pro-Nazi Show.

SOME of the things that go on in Washington are so fantastic you have to see them to believe.

Through the defense program and lend-lease bill the United States is expending billions to combat Nazism, and one of the leading executors of this policy is Secretary Jesse Jones, ruler of the RFC and department of commerce. Yet daily, under the block-long roof of the department of commerce, a show that has definite pro-Nazi propaganda implications is being staged.

It is not public. Admittance is by invitation, and the list has been confined to select government officials. The show consists of an exhibit, bearing the fancy title of "Econorama," and a lecturer.

It is financed by James D. Mooney, General Motors vice president, who for many years was head of the company's overseas division in Germany. General Motors has nothing to do with the show; it is entirely Mooney's baby except for the floor space generously provided by the commerce department.

Gist of "Econorama," a flashy exhibit of charts, graphs, lights and glass jars containing vari-colored waters, is that the U. S. should adopt German production methods and labor policies. With it goes a remarkable spiel.

The lecturer is Thomas M. McNeice, an easy-talking, personable young man, who can expound indefinitely on the failings of the U. S. economic system, and who is not averse to slipping in an occasional plug, by contrast, for German methods. Talking on the defense program, he declared that the way to speed it up was to take a leaf from the Nazis by cutting down civilian consumption and increasing the "productivity" of labor.

"Germany," he declared, "has learned her lesson. We haven't."

This remark was the last straw for a Federal Reserve Board economist, who had been listening in rising ire. "If you like the Nazis so much," he blurted out, "why don't you bring Hitler over here?"

McNeice made no reply.

Note—In a Saturday Evening Post article last August, Mooney declared that the British were taking a "hell of a licking," urged the United States to "get busy at once" and bring about a negotiated peace. "We have already done too much monkeying around in the European situation," Mooney wrote, "in helping England and France to take on Germany for a fight."

As Others See It

How To Refuse.

Man About Manhattan

—By GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK—A Swedish orphan with a French name who became a barber's apprentice, toured the world, became an American citizen, has now accumulated the finest collection of barber's tools and instruments, plus hundreds of etching and prints that have ever been brought together under one ownership.

This man is Charles de Zemler, a familiar figure about Rockefeller center, where he has several flourishing and large shops.

De Zemler is the author of "Once Over Lightly," which is an exhaustive study of the history of barbering, and it goes from antiquity to the present day. This book, unique in literature, has been bought by the libraries of more than 100 universities since Christmas. It is the result of 25 years of research, was intended as a history of a profession, but to those who happen to visit Rockefeller center it is a marvelous explanatory "guide" to his collection of prints, etchings, razors, bowls, bottles, etc., which go from 2500 BC, until 1941, AD.

IN his collection is a fine series of Chinese mirrors which he purchased from a Chinese banker. These, as all of his possessions, are displayed in the shops of Rockefeller center. He has razors that come from the mistic shadows of Greek and Roman antiquity. Some are half-moon in shape. He has pewter and silver bowls of the 14th century.

De Zemler was an orphan at six, and at 12 he was thrust into a Swedish barbershop and set to lathering. Since then, he says, "I've lathered myself all over the world." He has worked London, Paris, all the European capitals, Cairo — in fact China is the one place he has never seen, and he plans to visit it when world conditions are a little more inviting.

He came to this country in 1912 and became a citizen. He is proud of the fact that he has a son, Robert, in the 7th regiment, "now doing his bit for his country." He volunteered last month, reports de Zemler.

THROUGH his quest for authentic barber's tools of all ages has carried him over nine-tenths of the globe, and cost a fortune, de Zemler never has relinquished a single item, however valuable or however small, purchased for him.

Someday, when he dies, all this will go to the Metropolitan Museum and the New York public library. It will be a legacy such as never before has been bestowed, because there is nothing comparable to it anywhere. It pleases de Zemler to know that he will be the first to leave behind the props and the tools representative of the history of an ancient profession.

In all, he has spent nearly $50,000 in running down choice items ranging from Neolithic paraphernalia to barber's bottles of the 20th century. A few of his items came from the estate of the late Swedish match king, Kruger.

The nicest thing about these tools today is that you don't have to wade through museums to see them. They're on dispklay in the de Zemler shops and windows of Radio City.

A Farmer's Diary

An Ash Hopper

—By CALVIN A. BYERS

OFF from the smooth broad highway, down a rutty lane, I saw behind the summer kitchen an oldtime ash hopper. An old man lifted a large feather edged sheet metal lid and poured the contents of an ashpan in. Waves of grayish dust rose and floated eastward, as with a clanging rattle he closed the top.

It was the first ash hopper I had seen in years. I stopped to look at it closer. It was built of roughly sawed oak boards, four feet square at the top and about four inches at the bottom—shaped like the shell of an inverted pyramid. A two by four was spiked on either side near the middle on which were fastened short round wooden rockers that rested in hollow grooves in the backs of two solid oaken "horses" three feet high. By this device, the hopper might be tilted and easily emptied when the lye had been leached from the wood ashes that filled it.

Such a hopper was a fixture of my boyhood home. All winter long, father would empty ashes from our wood stoves into this hopper. Every spring he would pour water over the contents and I have watched the grayish bubbles hiss and steam and plop until even the outer boards were warm. The drippings ran down over a large grooved stone into an earthen crock—clear amber brown liquid. Mother would bring an egg to test the stuff. If the egg floated, the lye was good enough. If not, father must run it through again.

This lye was the basis of much homely sanitation, and the necessary ingredient in making the family supply of soap. All rancid fat, dirty lard and cracklings from butchering were utilized. The big iron butchering pot was put over an outdoor fire. The fat, the lye, the handful of sassafras for fragrance—salt. Perhaps that was all. A huge half barrel of potent, slippery soft soap was evolved.

Mother was a generous-minded individual well used to boys. This soap neutralized both dirt and outer skin. In summertime bare feet were supposed to be scrubbed at bedtime. Oftentimes we tried to silently slip away and feign sound slumber in hope of evading the smarting sting of that lye soap upon our reluctant skin. . . .

Farm women buy lye in cans nowadays. Just last week I saw a stack of white bars of homemade soap in a farmhouse closet. But the old ash hopper leach and the grooved flat stone with the crock below are now a part of the frugal colonial past.

observers in the Balkan capital today predicted the crown council would have no alternative but to yield to Germany.

In the war at sea, the London admiralty acknowledged the heaviest toll of shipping since last October, with the loss of 29 British, Allied and neutral vessels totalling 148,038 tons in the week ended March 2.

"The spring blitz which Hitler promised has begun," a British spokesman said, but he declared that British counter-measures were improving.

The admiralty said that German and Italian claims for the week totalled 432,500 tons—nearly triple the British figure. Weekly losses, excluding the withdrawal from Dunkerque, have averaged 63,342 since the war began.

After long delay, Thailand and French Indo-China signed a Japanese-arranged "peace protocol" ending their frontier conflict and giving Thailand an estimated 25,000 square miles of France's Far East colonial territory.

The agreement marked Japan's first successful mediation in her self-proclaimed role of leader of a sphere of influence in Greater East Asia.

The Japanese press, meanwhile, viewed United States senate passage of the aid-to-Britain bill as putting the U. S. a step nearer war and said the possibilities for American pressure on Japan were increased.

One newspaper, Asahi, said "New York information" indicated the first step under the bill would be a deal whereby American destroyers would be traded for British capital ships which the U. S. "can send to Far Eastern waters against Japan in order to aid (Chinese) Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek more aggressively."

One widely-read Japanese naval critic, Rear Admiral Gumpei Sekine, defined Japan's "co-prosperity sphere" in Asia to include India, Australia and the Philippines.

RAF and Nazi raiders carried out tempestuous overnight attacks, with the British reporting they set large fires in the German Rhineland and city of Cologne and bombed the docks at Boulogne, Cherbourg and Brest along the Nazi-held "invasion coast."

The Germans pounded the big Portsmouth naval base in a six-hour assault, in which a London communique noted that "buildings were damaged, fires started at several points and a number of people were killed."

London had four bombless alarms.

Berlin acknowledged civilian casualties and damage to homes in western Germany, but claimed two British raiders were downed.

On the Albania battlefront, the Greeks, struggling to take Tepeleni, claimed they had seized more strong Italian positions and taken 300 more prisoners, adding to a bag of several thousand in four days' fierce fighting.

Says Matsuoka Will Talk War Questions

BERLIN — (U.P.) — German quarters said today that "military questions" will be discussed with Japan's Foreign Minister Yosuke Matsuoka against the "significant" background of the United States lease-lend bill to aid Britain.

These authoritative quarters added:

eagerness to attack one of the tripartite powers, then it is a matter for the others to leap effectively to their aid."

FDR PREPARING CALL FOR CASH TO PAY FOR AID

House Votes on Amendments To British Aid Bill Today, Sends It to President.

of a radio broadcast or issuance of a written statement had not been decided.

Final action by the house was necessary only that house approval might be given senate changes in the aid legislation. Two hours were set aside for debate on these, to be followed by a vote about 2:30 or 3 p. m.

Meanwhile, a group of leaders of key house committees was summoned to the White House to go over with Mr. Roosevelt plans for making the program of aid to Britain and other countries fighting aggression immediately effective.

These plans fell into main categories:

First, immediate assistance in the form of small naval vessels, food supplies and various munitions which may be turned over to the British from existing United States army and navy equipment. Total value of such equipment, the aid bill specifies, must not exceed $1,300,000,000.

Second, long-range assistance in the form of armaments yet to be manufactured and for which Mr. Roosevelt must ask congress to make appropriations. The eventual cost of this phase of the program over the next three years has been placed by defense authorities at about $10,000,000,000.

The house procedure for completing congressional action on the lease-lend bill called for the two hours of debate to be divided equally between supporters and opponents of the legislation. Rep. Fish (R., N. Y.), who led the house opposition, said he favored the senate amendments "because they will be helpful" and he predicted that between 80 per cent and 90 per cent of his fellow Republicans would join in approving them.

In a statement Fish also said that the president could achieve national unity if he used the powers of the bill "without jeopardizing the peace or national defense of America."

"The responsibility now rests on the administration," he declared, 'and if we are taken into war it will be a president's war —not the people's."

Three senate opponents of the bill—Senator Clark (D., Mo.), Nye (R., N. D.) and Taft (R., O.)—said that as measures appropriating money for the lease-lend program came to congress there would be attempts to earmark funds for specific countries.

After the war is over, Nye predicted, it will be disclosed that there were "a number of plutocrats in Britain whose fortunes were untouched by the war."

"I don't think we ought to give the impression at any time," he added, "that there is a united front for handing the purse strings to Britain and letting her pull them when she pleases."

SAYS BRITAIN CAN MAN SHIPS

High Naval Sources Say Royal Navy Can Sail Entire American Fleet.

(By Associated Press)

LONDON – A high British naval source said today that Britain has enough trained personnel to man the whole American fleet if it were turned over to Britain for the battle of the Atlantic, which he said has now begun.

(The reason for this statement was not at once apparent. The British have not hitherto hinted that United States naval assistance was needed in the Atlantic.)

That the battle of the Atlantic now has started, the source said, is evidenced by the intensified submarine war, by the intensified air attack on British shipping and by Britain's counter measures.

Britain's counter measures were not outlined.

This informant said, however, that surface raiders were less a problem to British shipping than submarines and bombing planes.

He also stated that, while Britain welcomed the transfer of 50 destroyers from the United States in return for western hemisphere bases, she would be more benefitted by destroyers better equipped for anti-submarine and anti-aircraft warfare such as modern warships must face.

Bad Girl ignored her mistress' calls and backed up the slope carrying a starving German shepherd puppy whining in a basket. Another puppy in the basket was dead.

and the Friendly House. Last year the Fund gave the Service League $200 to aid its work.

The Dental Clinic, which is sponsored by Mansfield clubs and sororities, was launched two years ago and has been operating with funds raised through benefits and private solicitations. Under the Community Fund set-up these solicitations and benefits will cease and the Clinic will operate on funds allocated it by the Community Fund.

It has no paid workers and its objective is to provide dental work in emergency cases for all school children whose parents are unable to pay for it. Mansfield dentists have co-operated by doing the work at reduced fees.

The Clinic has asked for $1,500 for operating expenses for the fiscal year which is from May 31, 1941 to June 1, 1942. The sum allocated, however, is set up by the Community Fund budget committee of which Austin C. Rhoads is chairman.

Acceptance of the Dental Clinic into the Fund makes a total of 11 participating agencies.

Rev. Roller said today that he hopes to have his campaign committee set up by the latter part of the week. As head of the drive this year he succeeds Clyde Smaltz who served in that capacity for the past two years. He has been a resident of Mansfield for more than five years and has been active in community and civic work. A Pontiac tells you all about itself except how little it costs!

A GENERAL MOTORS MASTERPIECE

YOU DON'T NEED us to tell you what a whale of a car the Pontiac "Torpedo" is. The new Pontiac speaks for itself—and it tells you clearly that a smarter, roomier, sweeter-acting car will be hard to find.

The only time this Pontiac needs our help is when somebody says, "It's too high-priced for me." That's when we go to work, and here's what we tell them:

With all of its size, its beauty, its "expensive" look, Pontiac's prices are so close to the "lowest-priced three" that the difference is only a few dollars per month.

SIZE AND LUXURY. Nor will you get any impression of low cost from the roominess and luxury you find inside its handsome body by Fisher. Pontiac is tailored and fitted to compare favorably with the finest cars on the road.

PERFORMANCE. If you plan to buy a new car soon, try this new Pontiac now. You'll learn that way why Pontiac owners are our most enthusiastic cheer leaders. And remember, if you can afford any new car you can afford a new Pontiac!

COMFORT. You will never guess from a ride in a Pontiac that it's a low-priced car. Pontiac's perfected "Triple-Cushioned Ride" is conceded to be without equal in any car at any price. You can go on and on in a Pontiac . . . and step out relaxed and rested at the end of the trip.

ECONOMY. When you own a Pontiac, however, you realize that it's a tight-fisted miser with gas and oil and remarkably trouble-free in the bargain.

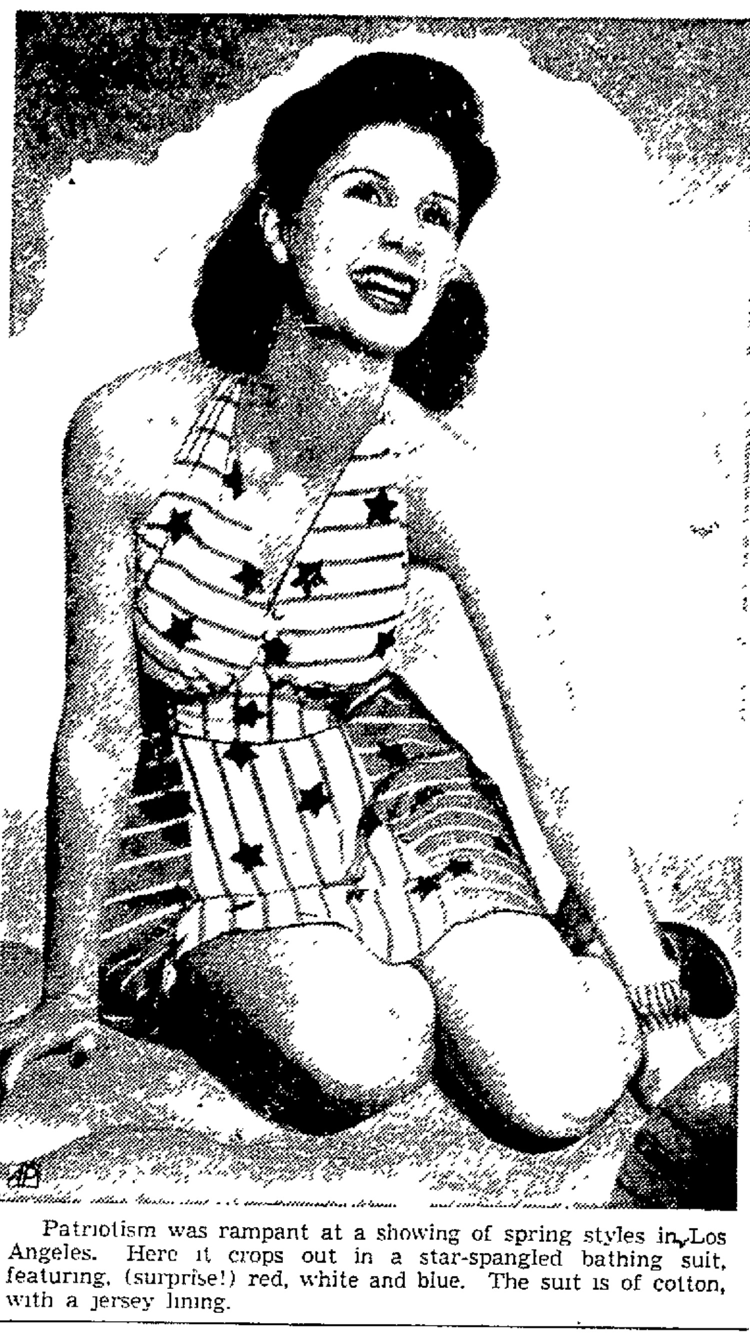
Patriotism In Suits



Patriotism was rampant at a showing of spring styles in Los Angeles. Here it crops out in a star-spangled bathing suit, featuring, (surprise!) red, white and blue. The suit is of cotton, with a jersey lining.

Parent Molests New Bride

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Old wives used to say if you can bring a baby through his second summer, you can save him. Medical science has now robbed infancy's second summer of its terrors, but what's to be done for the cavorting middle-aged man around his fiftieth summer?

To the amusement of his friends and the sorrow of those who love him, he will cavort. I've just had a letter from a young bride who, to keep the family peace, feels obliged to put up with her father-in-law's Indian Summer antics. Here's her letter:

"DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

"Instead of my honeymoon being the happiest time of my life and something to remember when I'm old, it's been a time of horror to me. My husband and I decided to live with his mother and father for the first year of our marriage. We wanted to save a little for a payment on our bungalow and our furniture, and the in-laws have a big house in which they live alone since their other children married.

"At first I couldn't understand why my father-in-law always wanted to hold my hand in a manner far from paternal. In a few weeks I understood all too well—the old goat had fallen for me, and without telling tales on him I was obliged to put up a bluff of liking him and enjoying his company.

"My husband has observed things, and while he hasn't said anything, he evidently thinks I encourage his father. We can't leave as we've made all our arrangements to stay for a year. But I'm bored to tears with the old party's clumsy endearments.

"Now it just happened that a young girl I knew back in my own home town had the same sort of trouble to put up with, and there was a frightful scandal in which the old man said she had encouraged him. Whether truthfully or not, he appeared against her when his son sued his wife for divorce.

"What in the name of goodness is the matter with these old men?

"GOOD-AND-MAD."

The matter with them is that they ARE old men. They see the boat pulling away from the shore with romance, love, laughter and all the gifts of the gods on board. So they decide to swim after it and clamor aboard in spite of the absurdidty of their antics trying to prove they're just as young as ever.

There is something indescribably poignant in this frantic effort of age to cling to youth at whatever cost. And the situation described by this young bride cannot be unusual, judging from the number of letters which come to this column concerning similar affairs. An in-law comes for a visit and forty-eight hours after her arrival, Dad has bought himself a new tie and begins to cut up didoes.

Sometimes, indeed, if the in-law is a gold-digger, she puts up with Dad gladly for what there may be in it. But no normal young woman whose affection is worth counting falls for one of these aged Romeos who've begun to creak in the joints. It's only fair to warn Romeo that any young girl who encourages him, is gold-digging and not observing union hours.

"Pitfalls of Love"

(A Sequel to Marriage Meddlers)

By ADELE GARRISON

"Would you mind," Ronald said icily, "telling me exactly what my mother wrote to Marion's mother? I think I have a right to know."

"But I have no right to tell you," I countered. "You see that, don't you?"

He stared at me for a long second.

"Then why did you mention it at all?" he asked bluntly.

I winced, but answered him frankly.

"Because I was so obsessed with the wish to grant your request to tell you everything from the beginning, that I forgot your mother's letter was not intended for your perusal. I never should have mentioned it. I see that now."

He looked at me strangely.

"That is the way I feel about what Marion wrote to me," he said, and I had a sudden panicky feeling that perhaps my squeamishness about revealing the letter of a foolish nervous woman might bar me from learning something vital to the solution of Marion's disappearance.

"I am not talking about that," I told him sharply. "I feel that everything, scruples, tenets, should go by the board in this grave emergency. If you think your mother's letter is essential to your understanding of this problem, I shall tell you about it."

He waited only an instant, then spoke firmly.

"I do think so." he said stubbornly. "I want to hear about it."

"Very well then," I said, trying to keep disapproval out of my voice. "But there is very little to tell. Your mother simply appealed to her old friend Aunt Lillian to find out if she knew what had happened to your — friendship—with Marion."

Ronald gave a hollow little laugh.

"'Friendship'!" he echoed mockingly.

"I should have said 'romance'." I went on steadily. "Your mother, naturally in great stress of mind because, as she said, you had lost fifteen pounds and were much upset, besaught Aunt Lillian to find out from Marion what was the matter. Aunt Lillian, not wishing to telephone Marion about it, sent the letter to me by my husband, with the request that I go to Weirhampton immediately and find out from Marion, if possible, what was wrong."

"Then you have the letter with you," he said tensely. "May I see it?"

"I'm sorry," I said. "It is in the car, and besides, that is really beyond my province, Ronald. I have told you everything that is essential."

"Yes, I suppose you have," he said gloomily. "But knowing Mother, I am sure she took eight pages to get that much over. And she probably blamed Marion bitterly, but—let that pass. If Aunt Lillian sent you that letter, she certainly didn't know then that Marion had disappeared from College. When did she find that out?"

"Only a few hours after she sent me the letter by Uncle Dicky," I answered. "The dean wrote her about Marion's being absent for four days, and asked what Lillian knew about it."

"Four days!" Ronald echoed. "Then—then—Carolyn must have known about it! The little — let me out of here! I'll choke the truth out of her!"

I had risen and gotten between him and the door at his first explosion, and he could not get out without throwing me bodily aside.

"Time enough for Carolyn afterward," I told him. "Yes, she undoubtedly knew about it, but there's no use questioning her now. And, as I told you, I have something most important to tell you."

I took his arm and steered him back to his chair.

"So the college knows everything," he said dully. "Well, they would have known soon enough but not this way."

COCKTAIL CIRCLES

Spread small round crackers with butter mixed in equal portions with yellow cream cheese. Sprinkle lightly with minced parsley and celery. Decorate tops with sliced pimiento-stuffed olives. Toast and serve warm with cocktails, soups or salads. These can be made up and ready for the toasting well in advance of the serving time, but they should be covered lightly with waxed paper and put in a cool place—not the refrigerator, however.

Use Oysters Now

By BETSY NEWMAN

"Time driveth on apace," as the poet says, and in a little while oyster season will be at an end. So serve the luscious bivalve while ye may.

Today's Menu.

Scalloped Oysters
Stewed Tomatoes
Spinach
Orange and Onion Salad
Filled Sponge Cake Coffee

Scalloped Oysters.

3 tbsps. butter
3 tbsps. flour
1½ cups milk and oyster liquor
Salt and pepper to taste
1 qt. oysters
½ cup buttered crumbs

Put butter in saucepan, melt and add flour, blend; add mixed milk and oyster liquor a little at a time, stirring all the time and cooking until mixture boils, then cook 5 minutes longer, and add seasonings. Grease a baking dish, put a little of the sauce in the bottom; cover with oysters which have been carefully picked over and all bits of shell removed. Add more sauce and more oysters until dish is filled, having sauce for top layer. Cover with buttered crumbs and bake about 20 minutes in hot (400° F.) oven. Serve as soon as done, so oysters will not become toughened. To prepare buttered crumbs, melt 1 tablespoon butter in frying pan or saucepan, and, when hot, add crumbs to it, stirring until they have absorbed the butter.

Filled Sponge Cake.

6 eggs, separated
¼ tsp. cream of tartar
1½ cups granulated sugar
1 cup sifted cake flour
½ tsp. salt
2½ tsp. vanilla
½ tsp. almond extract
1½ cups milk
2 eggs
1½ tbsps. unflavored gelatin
⅓ cup cold water
1½ cups heavy cream whipped
Coarsely grated semi-sweet chocolate

Beat egg whites until frothy, then add cream of tartar and beat until stiff but not dry. Beat egg yolks with rotary beater until thick and lemon-colored, add 1 cug sugar gradually, beating meanwhile. Carefully fold flour and ¼ teaspoon salt, which have been sifted together, into egg yolks, a little at a time, then fold in beaten egg whites with 1 teaspoon vanilla extract and ¼ teaspoon almond extract. Pour into ungreased sponge cake tube pan and bake in moderate oven (325° F.) for 1 hour or until done. Invert on cake rack and let cool. In the meantime, beat milk, whole eggs and remaining sugar and ¼ teaspoon salt together in top of double boiler, put over hot water and stir until mixture becomes of custard consistency and coats a silver spoon, about 10 minutes. Remove from heat, add gelatin which has been soaked in cold water for 5 minutes. When mixture is cool, add 1½ teaspoons vanilla extract and ¼ teaspoon almond extract. Remove cake from pan and cut crosswise into 3 layers. Put largest layer topside down on cake plate, rolling up pieces of wax paper and placing in center hole to keep filling from running into it. Chill a little more than ½ filling, and when nearly stiff, fold in a little more than ½ whipped cream. Pile this mixture lightly on top of largest layer of cake. Place it in refrigerator until almost firm then place over it the next largest layer of cake. Prepare remaining filling with remaining cream and pile it on this layer of cake. When nearly set, place remaining layer of cake on top. Chill in refrigerator or other cold place until set. Before serving, remove wax paper and sprinkle top with powdered sugar. Serve in wedge-shaped pieces with grated chocolate sprinkled over each piece. Serves 12.—Good Housekeeping Institute.

HOROSCOPE

For Wednesday, March 12.

A particularly progressive and promising day, with much of an expansive and stabilizing nature in operation among the major planets. It should be a time for definite action in putting over ambitious programs through sound judgment, hard work and the intervention of those of prestige and financial standing. Political, diplomatic or welfare organizations may be approached confidently for support.

Those whose birthday it is may find a year in which opportunity knocks at the door with decisive and definite insistence. It is a time for launching worthy propositions of a practical and constructive nature, with the good prospect of cooperation, financial as well as influential, of those in high places.

A child born on this day should have much efficiency and ambition, with practical abilities to substantiate its objectives. While generous, expansive and trustworthy, it may be easily victimized by its friends.

"The Authority on Authorities"

NOT A HERO'S PLAY

Usually a squeeze play is reported as the exploit of a heroic player who used it to make his contract or perhaps gain an extra trick. But the principles of the squeeze or any other play are just as valuable in keeping yourself from being beaten an undue number of tricks on a contract you cannot make.

East would have made a sound double of the 6-No Trumps if West had not made his unsound one. After West led his club 10 to the A and South led a heart to the K, the declarer regretted the whole thing especially his own over-optimistic redouble, since East discarded a club on the trick. He could limit his losses to down one if the diamonds would break. So he played a diamond and ducked it, East winning with the J.

When the club Q came back to the K, North throwing off a spade, he played his two diamond tops, but they left West with a winner here, as East discarded another club. To build a squeeze now for down one, the declarer deliberately gave up a diamond to West, discarding a club from his own hand. West had nothing to return but a heart. So three hearts were run in the dummy, the last squeezing East between the black suits. At that stage, besides the heart J-6, North held the spade K-4 and South the spade 4-7-2 and club 6.

East's four cards at that time were his top three spades and club J. If he threw the latter, South would throw a spade, then take two spades and a club. So he tossed a spade. Thereupon declarer cashed the spade K, spade A and spade 7, limiting his loss to one down.

Tomorrow's Problem.

VICTIM OF CIRCUMSTANCES OPERATES RESTAURANT CHAIN

TOLEDO—(AP)—Grace E. Smith of Toledo, newly elected president of the National Restaurant Association, regards herself as a victim of circumstances in following a career.

Trained at the College of Wooster for teaching, Miss Smith taught in the high school at Wapakoneta, O., for several years before coming to Toledo to become assistant general secretary in charge of educational work for the Young Women's Christian Association.

While enjoying the work, the manager of the association's cafeteria suddenly resigned and Miss Smith was "talked into" assuming the position temporarily.

That was in 1909 and started a career in catering that has been unbroken and has gained the Toledo woman an international reputation and election the national trade association of 12,000 members, over 90 per cent of them men.

When Miss Smith became manager of the Y. W. C. A. cafeteria it was considered a hopelessly losing proposition. Within a year it was on a profitable basis.

In 1916 Miss Smith opened the first of numerous cafeterias and restaurants she has operated under the title of the Grace E. Smith company. Her system of dispensing food has changed little over the years. It is simple, although she demands that her foods be tastefully displayed. The secret of her success, Miss Smith says, is in her policy of personally selecting only the finest raw products and insisting that the highest standards of preparation be adhered to.

Although head of one of the largest catering companies in the United States and active in many other affairs, Miss Smith still spends hours each day personally supervising the operation of her kitchens and bakeries and occasionally, when rush hours demand it, goes behind the counter to serve or work in the cashier's cage.

Her kitchens are staffed almost entirely by women, with primary supervision vested in women graduates of domestic science schools. Miss Smith designed and supervised the fitting of her new 650-seating capacity cafeteria and service restaurant in downtown Toledo, and is assisted by her brother, Ralph B. Smith, and a sister, Miss Ora Smith. Her staff of employes numbers nearly 400.

Miss Smith is much in demand as a lecturer before clubs, associations and colleges. She is a past president of the Ohio Restaurant association.

She is a charter member of the American Association of University Women, Toledo Women's club, Chamber of Commerce, Inverness club, a past trustee of the College of Wooster and has been active in civic and philanthropic affairs in Toledo for 20 years.

MORE THAN GOOD

TOPEKA, Kas.—(AP)—A Topeka bus company awarded a bonus of $25 each to 16 drivers who went through 1940 without an accident. And it's an accident, so far as the company is concerned, when another car hits a bus standing still.

SO HE LIKES HORSES

BALTIMORE—(AP)—The sailor who rents a rowboat on his shore leave has nothing on Harry Schofield, a mounted traffic officer. Schofield's hobby is horseback riding. On days off, he takes his family out for a gallop, a pony carrying his two-and-a-half-year-old daughter.
